PREFACE

The Maryland Public Information Act is based on the enduring principle that public knowledge of government activities is critical to the functioning of a democratic society; that a Government of the people, by the people, and for the people must be open to the people. Members of the public need and deserve complete information as they make the decisions and form the opinions that determine our future path, and the Act ensures that those needs are met fairly and expeditiously while protecting important privacy rights and other public policy goals.

As Attorney General, I am committed to open access to information, and to promoting a consistent application of the Act throughout State and local government. The Office of the Attorney General has long worked toward ensuring the correct implementation of the Act, and I am continuing and expanding on that tradition.

This manual is designed to be a resource for a range of users, from members of the public and the media who request information, to the government officials who have the responsibility to implement the Act's requirements.

As technology advances, expectations about the speed and scope of access to information evolve, and policy-makers grapple with how best to accommodate those expectations in a manner that is both efficient and workable. The Fourteenth Edition of this manual reflects extensive changes enacted during the 2015 session of the Maryland General Assembly to move the law forward, as well as noteworthy developments in the case law and the opinions of the Office of the Attorney General.

The 14th edition of this manual, like those that precede it, is the work of many talented and committed individuals. Special credit goes to former Deputy Attorney General, later Judge, Dennis M. Sweeney for preparing the first several editions, and to former Assistant Attorneys General Jack Schwartz and Robert N. McDonald (now Judge McDonald) who assumed responsibility for subsequent editions. The most recent editions have been produced under the direction of Adam D. Snyder, Chief Counsel, Opinions and Advice. Deborah P. Spence deserves thanks for preparing and finalizing the manuscript.

I also wish to thank the local government officials, members of the private bar and representatives of the media and open-government advocacy groups for their many constructive suggestions about how best to implement the PIA.

In addition to being available in printed version, the Manual is on-line at <http://www.oag.state.md.us/Opengov/pia.htm>.

Please let me know if you have suggestions for further refinements.

Chapter 1:

Scope and Agency Responsibilities

A. Origin

Maryland's Public Information Act ("PIA"), Title 4 of the General Provisions Article ("GP"), grants the public a broad right of access to records that are in the possession of State and local government agencies. It has been a part of the Annotated Code of Maryland since its enactment as Chapter 698 of the Laws of Maryland 1970 and is similar in purpose to the federal Freedom of Information Act ("FOIA"), 5 U.S.C. § 552, and the public information and open records acts of other states. The text of the PIA is reproduced in Appendix E.

The basic mandate of the PIA is to enable people to have access to government records without unnecessary cost or delay. Custodians of records are to provide such access unless the requested records fall within one of the exceptions in the statute.

1. Relation to Common Law

Public information statutes such as the PIA expand the limited common law right of the public in some jurisdictions to inspect certain government records. Originally, the right to inspect public records in Maryland was very limited under common law, even as to court records. See, e.g., Belt v. Prince George's County Abstract Co., 73 Md. 289 (1890) (while title company was entitled pursuant to its charter to have access to certain court records, it must pay fees required by law). A 1956 Attorney General's opinion noted that the Court of Appeals had held that records could not be inspected "out of mere curiosity." 41 Opinions of the Attorney General 113 (1956); see also Fayette Co. v. Martin, 130 S.W.2d 838, 843 (Ky. 1939) ("[A]t common law, every person is entitled to the inspection, either personally or by his agent, of public records . . . provided he has an interest therein which is such as would enable him to maintain or defend an action for which the document or record sought can furnish evidence or necessary information.").

More recently, the Court of Appeals recognized that the “common law principle of openness” concerning court proceedings is not limited to the trial itself, but extends generally to court proceedings and documents. Baltimore Sun Co. v. Mayor and City Council, 359 Md. 653 (2000); see also Nixon v. Warner Communications, Inc., 435 U.S. 589, 597-99 (1978); 76 C.J.S. Records § 63 (1994).

The two main liberalizations of most modern public information laws, including Maryland’s, are the abrogation of a personal “legal interest” requirement to obtain access to records and the expansion of the types of records that are available for public inspection. In passing the PIA, the Legislature sought to accord wide-ranging access to public information concerning the operation of government. See GP § 4-103; Ireland v. Shearin, 417 Md. 401, 408 (2010).

2. Relation to Public Records Statutes of Other Jurisdictions

In many circumstances, FOIA, other states’ public information acts, and cases decided under those laws are persuasive in interpreting the PIA. Maryland’s original act was very similar to those of Wyoming and Colorado and one of those laws was likely used as a model. The United States Department of Justice publishes an extensive guide to FOIA titled Freedom of Information Act Guide & Privacy Act Overview, available on-line as Freedom of Information Act Guide, www.justice.gov/oip/foi-act.htm. The leading treatise on FOIA also contains a chapter on state laws. 2 James T. O’Reilly, Federal Information Disclosure Ch. 27 (3d ed. 2000). For a review of state public information acts, see Braverman and Heppler, A Practical Review of State Open Records Laws, 49 Geo. Wash. L. Rev. 720 (1981). The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press has published a summary of each state’s public records laws titled Open Government Guide, available on-line at <http://www.rcfp.org/ogg/index.php>.

B. Scope of the PIA

1. Public Agencies and Officials Covered

The PIA covers virtually all public agencies or officials in the State. It includes all branches of State government – legislative, judicial, and executive. On the local level, the PIA covers all counties, cities, towns, school districts, and special districts. See GP § 4-101(i), (j). Although the statute has also included the term “unincorporated town” since its inception, that term is undefined and it is not clear what, if any, entities it encompasses.

The PIA also applies to any unit or instrumentality of the State or of a political subdivision. GP § 4-101(j); see, e.g., Moberly v. Herboldsheimer, 276 Md. 211 (1975) (Memorial Hospital of Cumberland is an agency of the City of Cumberland). Even agencies that receive no public funds but are created by statute may be subject to the PIA. For example, the Court of Appeals, overruling a lower court, held that one such agency, the former Maryland Insurance Guaranty Association, was subject to the PIA. A.S. Abell Publishing Co. v. Mezzanote, 297 Md. 26 (1983). The Court considered whether the entity served a public purpose, was subject to a significant degree of control by the government, and was immune from tort liability. See also 86 Opinions of the Attorney General 94 (2001) (proposed citizen police review board, established by municipal ordinance and funded and staffed by municipality, and performing public function would be unit or instrumentality of municipal government for purposes of PIA).

A nonprofit entity incorporated under the State’s general corporation law may also be considered a unit or instrumentality of a political subdivision for purposes of the PIA, if there is a sufficient nexus linking the entity to the local government. See Baltimore Development Corp. v. Carmel Realty Associates, 395 Md. 299 (2006) (nonprofit corporation formed to plan and implement long range development strategies in city was subject to substantial control by city and thus was instrumentality of city subject to PIA); Andy’s Ice Cream, Inc. v. City of Salisbury, 125 Md. App. 125, cert. denied, 353 Md. 473 (1999) (Salisbury Zoo Commission subject to PIA, given the Mayor and City Council’s role in the appointment of Commission members, authority over budget and by-laws, and power to dissolve Commission); Letter of Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Delegate Alfred C. Carr \(June 2, 2009\) \(Citizen Advisory Board on Traffic Issues is an instrumentality of Montgomery County\); Letter of Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Delegate Kevin Kelly (Aug. 3, 2006) (volunteer fire department is not a unit of government subject to the PIA); Letter of Assistant Attorney General Robert N. McDonald to Senator Joan Carter Conway (Oct. 4, 2007) (status of various organizations under the PIA).

In rare instances, the General Assembly has exempted an instrumentality of the State from coverage under the Public Information Act. Napata v. University of Maryland Medical System Corp., 417 Md. 724 (2011) (UMMS not subject to the PIA because its enabling law provides that it “is not subject to any provisions of law affecting only governmental or public entities”).

The PIA covers a broader range of government entities than FOIA and some other public records laws. The PIA, unlike FOIA, covers all “public” records, and is not limited to records of “agencies.” For example, under FOIA, the immediate personal staff of the President is not included in the term “agency.” As a result, records held by advisors to the President need not be disclosed under FOIA. Kissinger v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136, 155-56 (1980). Under the PIA, however, the Governor and the Governor’s immediate staff are not automatically exempt. Office of the Governor v. Washington Post Co., 360 Md. 520 (2000). As explained by the Court of Appeals, “cases deciding whether governmental documents are ‘agency records’ within the meaning of [FOIA] are not very pertinent in determining whether a governmental document is disclosable under the [PIA].” 360 Md. at 555. The Maryland courts have not definitively addressed the status of records of individual legislators, many of which are covered by constitutional privileges. See p. 3-6 below.

The PIA does not apply to a private entity, such as a homeowners’ association. However, other provisions of State law may provide for the retention and availability of records in specific contexts. See Annotated Code of Maryland, Real Property Article, § 11-116 (books and records of council of unit owners of condominium); § 11A-128 (books and records of time-share property); § 11B-112 (books and records of homeowners association).

In light of the very broad scope of the PIA, the burden falls on any governmental entity or official asserting exclusion from the PIA to show a legislative intent to exempt that entity’s or official’s records from the PIA’s general rule of disclosure.

2. Records Covered

All “public records” are covered by the PIA. The term “public record” is defined in GP § 4-101(j) and includes not only written material but also photographs, photostats, films, microfilms, recordings, tapes, computerized records, maps, drawings, and any copy of a public record. See 92 Opinions of the Attorney General 26, 28 (2007) (“public record” includes police mug shots); 81 Opinions of the Attorney General 140, 144 (1996) (“public record” includes both printed and electronically stored versions of e-mail messages); 71 Opinions of the Attorney General 288 (1986) (tape records of calls to 911 Emergency Telephone System centers are public records, but portions of the recordings may fall within certain exceptions to disclosure); 73 Opinions of the Attorney General 12, 24 (1988) (“public record” includes correspondence that is made or received by a unit of State government in connection with its conduct of public business). See also Armstrong v. Executive Office of the President, 1 F.3d 1274 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (electronic version of e-mail message is a “record” under the Federal Records Act). A private document that an agency has read and incorporated in its files is a “public record.” Artesian Ind. v. Department of HHS, 646 F. Supp. 1004, 1007 n.6 (D.D.C. 1986).

Public records are any records that are made or received by a covered public agency in connection with the transaction of public business. The scope is broad, and all “records” possessed by an agency generally fall within the definition of “public records.” For example, a database set up by a private vendor for use by a public agency for risk management purposes is a “public record.” Prince George’s County v. The Washington Post Co., 149 Md. App. 289, 335 (2003) (remanded to allow government or vendor to demonstrate whether database fields qualify as vendor’s proprietary intellectual property). Materials supplied to a legislative committee are public records normally available for inspection. Letter of Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Delegate John Adams Hurson (May 14, 2004). Photographs posted on the Governor’s website are public records. Letter of Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Senator Roy P. Dyson (July 14, 2005). Individual criminal trial transcripts in the hands of the Public Defender are public records available for inspection and copying, 68 Opinions of the Attorney General 330 (1983), as are prosecutorial files of a State’s Attorney unless subject to an exemption under the PIA. 81 Opinions of the Attorney General 154 (1996). In addition, records gathered by a unit of State government, given to the federal government to be used at a federal trial, and not used exclusively at a State trial, are considered “public records” subject to disclosure, if the State agency has either the original documents or copies of them. Epps v. Simms, 89 Md. App. 371 (1991).

The term “public record” explicitly encompasses the salaries paid to public employees, including bonuses and performance awards. GP § 4-101(j)(2); Moberly v. Herboldsheimer, 276 Md. 211 (1975); Opinion of the Attorney General No. 81-034 (Nov. 23, 1981) (unpublished); 83 Opinions of the Attorney General 192 (1998). It also includes an employment contract of a public employee because it evidences how a publicly-funded salary is earned. University System of Maryland v. The Baltimore Sun Co., 381 Md. 79, 89-90, 102-03 (2004).

Although most records located at a public agency fall within the definition of “public records,” some records might fall outside the definition. For example, the Supreme Court held that Henry Kissinger’s notes of telephone conversations, prepared while he was in the Office of the President, were not State Department records under FOIA, even though Dr. Kissinger had brought them with him to the State Department. Kissinger v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136 (1980). The Court noted that “[i]f mere physical location of papers and materials could confer status as an ‘agency record’ Kissinger’s personal books, speeches, and all other memorabilia stored in his office would have been agency records subject to disclosure under the FOIA.” 445 U.S. at 157.

Certain records in possession of the State might not qualify as “public records.” For example, records of telephone calls made from Government House, the official residence of the Governor in Annapolis, are not public records under the PIA. Office of the Governor v. Washington Post Co., 360 Md. 520, 536 (2000). Similarly, personal matters and family engagements may properly be redacted prior to release of the Governor’s scheduling records under the PIA. 360 Md. at 543. In Office of the Governor, the Court of Appeals declined to address whether telephone message slips and an official’s individual appointment calendar that is not distributed to other staff are public records. 360 Md. at 555; cf. Bureau of Nat’l Affairs v. Dep’t of Justice, 742 F.2d 1484, 1496 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (such records not “agency records” under FOIA); see also Consumer Fed’n of America v. United States Dep’t of Agric., 455 F.3d 283 (D.C. Cir. 2006) (electronic appointment calendars of certain officials were “agency records” under FOIA); Bloomberg, L.P. v. United States Sec. and Exch. Comm’n, 357 F. Supp. 2d 156, 165-66 (D.D.C. 2004) (telephone message slips and computerized calendar created for personal use of SEC Chairman not “agency records”).

A private contractor’s own records are not “public records” if the agency does not possess them, even if the agency has a contractual right to obtain them. Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169 (1980); see also 80 Opinions of the Attorney General 257 (1995) (definition of “public record” does not extend to records that are required to be maintained by an applicant for a residential child care facility license, if they never come into the possession of a State agency). On the other hand, an agency’s records remain “public records” even if the agency outsources the task of maintaining them to a private contractor.

C. Role of the Custodian and Official Custodian

Central to the structure of the PIA are the roles played by the “custodian” and “official custodian” of the agency records. They are the public officials who must take actions under the statute. Certain other agency personnel may have key roles in responding to PIA requests. For example, the agency’s Public Information Officer may respond to inquiries from the press or the agency may designate a PIA coordinator to coordinate responses to certain types of requests. See Appendix H. These officials may or may not also perform the statutory functions of “custodian” or “official custodian.”

A custodian is any “authorized” person who has physical custody and control of the agency’s public records. GP § 4-101(d). The “custodian” is the person who has the responsibility to allow inspection of a record and to determine, in the first instance, whether inspection can or should be denied. GP § 4-201. The custodian is also responsible for preparing written denials when inspection is not allowed. GP § 4-203(c). An agency official or employee who is not entitled by law to possess agency records may still become a “de facto” custodian and, therefore, become “authorized” within the meaning of GP § 4-101(d) when he or she in fact has assumed custody of public records. 65 Opinions of the Attorney General 365 (1980).

The “official custodian” is the officer or employee of the agency who has the overall legal responsibility for the care and keeping of public records. GP § 4-101(f). Often, the “official custodian” will be the head of the agency. The official custodian is to consider designating specific types of public records of the unit that can be made available immediately on request and maintaining a list of such records. GP § 4-201(c). The official custodian is authorized to decide whether to seek court action to protect records from disclosure. GP § 4-358. The official custodian is also the person who must establish “reasonable fee” schedules under GP § 4-206. The official custodian can also be the “custodian” of the records, depending upon who has physical custody and control of the records. GP § 4-101(d), (f).

Although a PIA request directed to the “official custodian” of records will suffice under the Act, applicants may also submit requests to the PIA representative identified on the agency’s website. See GP § 4-503 (requiring each governmental unit to post on its website the contact information of its PIA representative). There is no requirement that the request be made to the physical custodian of the records. See Ireland v. Shearin, 417 Md. 401, 410 (2010) (official custodian had no basis for requiring requester to resubmit PIA request to physical custodian of records sought). At the same time, the official custodian is not obligated to gather records from disparate custodians to one location for inspection, especially if it would interfere with official business. 417 Md. at 411.

Section 4-201(b) provides that, “[t]o protect public records and to prevent unnecessary interference with official business, each official custodian shall adopt reasonable rules and regulations that . . . govern timely production and inspection of a public record.” A set of model regulations for State agencies is included in Appendix F.

Chapter 2:

Right of Access to Records

A. Right to Inspect Records

GP § 4-103(a) provides that “[a]ll persons are entitled to have access to information about the affairs of government and the official acts of public officials and employees.” The right is made clear in GP § 4-201(a)(1), which states that, “[e]xcept as otherwise provided by law, a custodian shall permit a person or governmental unit to inspect any public record at any reasonable time.” Inspection or copying of a public record may be denied only to the extent permitted under the PIA. GP § 4-201(a)(2).

The PIA grants a broad right of inspection to “any person.” The term “person,” defined in GP § 1-114, extends to entities as well as individuals. A person need not show that he or she is “aggrieved” or a “person in interest.” Superintendent v. Henschen, 279 Md. 468 (1977). Nor is access restricted to citizens or residents of Maryland. Cf. McBurney v. Young, 133 S. Ct. 1709 (2013) (holding that provision of Virginia FOIA law limiting access to Virginia citizens did not violate federal Constitution). In most cases, a person need not justify or otherwise explain a request to inspect records, and a custodian of records may not require a person to say who they are or why they want the records as a prerequisite to responding to a request. GP § 4-204. Nor may a custodian ignore a request on the grounds that it was made for the purpose of harassment. GP § 4-203(c)(2).

In some instances, the PIA provides a “person in interest” with a greater right of access to a particular type of record than that available to other requesters. In these instances, the custodian must determine whether the requester is a “person in interest.” Such special rights of access apply to the following types of records or information: examination records (GP § 4-345(b)), information about a person’s finances (GP § 4-336(c)), higher education investment contracts (GP § 4-314(b)), information relating to notaries (GP § 4-332(d)), licensing information (GP §§ 4-333(d) and 4-334(b)), medical or psychological information (GP § 3-229(c)), personnel records (GP § 4-311(b)), records pertaining to investigations (GP § 4-351(b)), retirement records (GP § 4-312(b)), student records (GP § 4-313(b)) records concerning persons with alarm or security systems (GP § 4-339(b)), and records with identifying information concerning enrollees at senior centers (GP § 4-340(c)).

The term “person in interest” is defined generally by GP § 4-101(g) as the subject of the record or, in some cases, that person’s representative. Cases construing the term “person in interest” within the investigatory records context have limited it to the person that is being investigated and have not extended it to either the complainant or the person performing the investigation. See Maryland Dep’t of State Police v. Dashiell, 443 Md. 435 (2015) (person making the complaint that triggered internal investigation is not a “person in interest”); Mayor and City Council of Baltimore v. Maryland Committee Against the Gun Ban, 329 Md. 78 (1993) (political committee that was served with a subpoena was not a “person in interest” in connection with records relating to a Baltimore City Police Department Internal Affairs investigation; the officers who served the subpoena were the subject of the investigation and were thus the “persons in interest”); see also 71 Opinions of the Attorney General 297 (1986) (with respect to a tape recording of a hearing involving involuntary admission of a patient to State mental health facility, “the person in interest” is the patient or the patient’s representative, not the staff who participated in the hearing).

The term “person in interest” includes the “designee” of the person who is the subject of the record. GP § 4-101(g). While the statute does not state how an individual is identified as a “designee,” agencies may find it useful to require affirmation from the person who is the subject of the record when access to the record is otherwise limited. Letter of Assistant Attorney General Bonnie A. Kirkland to Delegate Kevin Kelly (April 14, 2004). If a “person in interest” has a legal disability, then that individual’s parent or legal representative may act on the individual’s behalf as a “person in interest.” GP § 4-101(g)(2). However, a parent whose parental rights have been terminated with respect to a child may not act as a “person in interest” on the child’s behalf. 90 Opinions of the Attorney General 45, 58-59 (2005).

While a custodian cannot require a requester to explain the purpose for which the requester wants the records as a prerequisite to responding to a PIA request, the requester’s intended use may be an appropriate subject of discussion in certain circumstances. For example, a requester who wishes to convince a custodian that it is “in the public interest” for the requester to waive a fee under GP § 4-206(e) or to release records covered by one of the discretionary exceptions in Part IV may choose to explain the purpose underlying the request. See pp. 3-28 and 7-3 below. The use to which the requester intends to put the requested information may also be relevant in an action for a protective order brought under GP § 4-358. See Howard v. Alexanderson, Nos. C-13-063914, C-13-063484 (Cir. Ct. Carroll Cty. Jan. 16, 2014); p. 3-43 below.

An agency has no obligation to create records to satisfy a PIA request. For example, if a request is made for the report of a consultant and the consultant did not issue a written report, the PIA does not require that a written report be created in order to satisfy the request.

Whether or not an agency response would involve the creation of a “new record” has sometimes arisen in the context of electronic records. For example, if an agency maintains certain records in an electronic database and a PIA request seeks a subset of that database or the generation of a report from the database, is the request seeking access to existing records – required by the PIA – or seeking the creation of a “new record” – not required by the PIA?

In the past, agencies sometimes declined to fulfill such requests on the basis of authority from other jurisdictions that public records acts do not require an agency to “reprogram” its computers to respond to a request. See Yeager v. DEA, 678 F.2d 315, 324 (D.C. Cir. 1982). In 2011, the General Assembly addressed this question in legislation concerning access to electronic records under the PIA. 2011 Md. Laws, ch. 536; see pp. 6-2 through 6-4 below. In a provision obligating a custodian of records to provide a copy of an electronic record in a “searchable and analyzable electronic format,” the General Assembly indicated that the custodian was not required to “create, compile, or program a new public record.” GP § 4-205(c)(4)(i). The 2011 law also provided that, “if a public record exists in a searchable and analyzable electronic format, the act of a custodian providing a portion of the public record in a searchable and analyzable electronic format does not constitute creating a new public record.” GP § 4-205(c)(5).

Application of this provision will depend on the nature and characteristics of particular databases, but generally speaking, an agency is obligated to extract data from an existing database if it has the capacity to do so “within [its] existing functionality and in the normal course.” Comptroller of the Treasury v. Immanuel, 216 Md. App. 259, 271 (2014). So, an agency should comply with a request if it has staff available who routinely perform the type of data extraction requested, but need not do so if it would call for expertise outside the agency's existing capabilities. Nor must the agency comply with requests that call for it to generate new data or analyze or summarize data. 216 Md. App. at 271-72 (requiring Comptroller to extract data from database of unclaimed property).

Sometimes a person will present an agency with a "standing request" which seeks production of a category of public records at regular intervals in the future as those records are created. Although an agency may honor such a request, the agency is not required to commit itself to provide records that have not yet been created. See Letter of Assistant Attorney General Jack Schwartz to Mark M. Viani, Associate County Attorney, Calvert County (May 22, 1998).

Of course, records no longer retained by an agency cannot be examined. Prince George's County v. The Washington Post Co., 149 Md. App. 289, 323 (2003). However, a custodian should not destroy records to avoid compliance with a pending request or in a manner contrary to the agency's record retention schedule.

B. Government Agency's Access to Records

The PIA generally regulates the access of one government agency to the records of another. A governmental unit is specifically given the right to inspect public records in GP §§ 4-103(b), 4-201(a), and 4-202(a) and is given the right to appeal a denial of inspection by GP §§ 4-361 and 4-362. Thus, when a request for inspection of records is made to a State agency by another State agency, a federal agency, or a local government entity, the custodian should consider the effect of the PIA. See Prince George's County v. Maryland Comm'n on Human Relations, 40 Md. App. 473, 485 (1978), vacated on other grounds, 285 Md. 205 (1979); 81 Opinions of the Attorney General 164 (1996); see also 86 Opinions of the Attorney General 94, 108-09 (2001). In addition, the agencies involved should consider whether another law governs the matter of interagency access. For example, requests for access to records by the Legislative Auditor in connection with an audit are not governed by the PIA. 76 Opinions of the Attorney General 287 (1991). If the other law limits access to records, the requesting agency has no greater access under the PIA, as the PIA always defers to other law. 92 Opinions of the Attorney General 137, 145-47 (2007).

C. Scope of Search

The PIA does not address the issue of the adequacy of the agency's search for records. Guidance may be found, however, in the case law under FOIA. In judging the adequacy of an agency's search for documents in response to a FOIA request, the court asks whether the agency has conducted a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents, not whether it has unearthed every single potentially responsive document. Ethyl Corp. v. EPA, 25 F.3d 1241 (4th Cir. 1994); Neighborhood Alliance of Spokane County v. Spokane County, 172 Wn.2d 702, 719-20 (2011) (applying FOIA standard in absence of analogous provision of state law). Under this standard, agencies may be required to conduct relatively broad and time-consuming searches. See, e.g., Ruotolo v. Dept. of Justice, 53 F.3d 4 (2d Cir. 1995) (onus is on the agency to demonstrate that a search would be unduly burdensome, and this obligation is met only in cases involving truly massive volumes of records). However, an agency would normally not be required to enlist specialized assistance to reconstitute discarded or deleted records. Care To Live v. Food and Drug Administration, 631 F.3d 336, 343-44 (6th Cir. 2011) (agency need not obtain assistance of information technology expert to recover deleted e-mails and electronic documents in order to conduct a reasonable search).

Chapter 3: Exceptions to Disclosure

The general right of access to records granted by the PIA is limited by numerous exceptions to the disclosure requirement. Given the PIA's policy in favor of public access, GP § 4-103(a), and the requirement that the PIA "be construed in favor of permitting inspection of a record," GP § 4-103(b), these exceptions should be construed narrowly. See Office of the Governor v. Washington Post Co., 360 Md. 520 (2000).

The PIA exceptions fall into three basic categories. First, the exceptions in Subtitle 3, Part I authorize non-disclosure if a source of law outside the Public Information Act prevents disclosure. GP § 4-301. Second, the mandatory exceptions in Parts II and III impose an affirmative obligation on the custodian to deny inspection for specific classes of records and information. Third, the exceptions in Part IV allow the custodian to exercise discretion as to whether the specified records are to be disclosed. More than one exception may apply to a public record, and the exceptions are not mutually exclusive. Office of the Attorney General v. Gallagher, 359 Md. 341 (2000). Many of the exceptions are an attempt by the Legislature to balance individual privacy interests against the public right of access. University System of Maryland v. The Baltimore Sun Co., 381 Md. 79, 95 (2004).

In addition, Part V contains a "last resort" provision, which allows a custodian to deny inspection temporarily and seek court approval to continue to withhold a record that otherwise would be subject to inspection. GP § 4-358. Unless an agency obtains a special court order under the statute to justify withholding a record, there is no basis for withholding a record other than an exception in the PIA. See, e.g., Police Patrol Security Systems v. Prince George's County, 378 Md. 702, 716-17 (2003) (there is no discrete "public interest," "personal information," or "unwarranted invasion of privacy" exemption to PIA). Many of the PIA's exceptions parallel those in FOIA. Cases decided under similar provisions of the federal FOIA are persuasive precedents in construing the PIA. See, e.g., Boyd v. Gullett, 64 F.R.D. 169, 176 (D. Md. 1974); Equitable Trust Co. v. State Comm'n on Human Relations, 42 Md. App. 53 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 287 Md. 80 (1980); 58 Opinions of the Attorney General 53, 58-59 (1973).

A. Exceptions Based on Other Sources of Law

Under GP § 4-301(1), inspection is to be denied where “by law, the public record is privileged or confidential.” Furthermore, under GP § 4-301(2), the custodian must deny inspection if the inspection is contrary to:

- State statute, GP § 4-301(2)(i);
- federal statute or regulation, GP § 4-301(2)(ii); or
- a rule adopted by the Court of Appeals or order of a court of record, GP § 4-301(2)(iii), (iv).

1. State Statutes

Many State statutes bar disclosure of specified records. Examples include Criminal Procedure Article, § 10-219 (restrictions on dissemination of “criminal history record information”), see 92 Opinions of the Attorney General 26, 30–37 (2007); Courts and Judicial Proceedings Article, § 3-8A-27 (protection of police records pertaining to minors), see 85 Opinions of the Attorney General 249 (2000) (protection under statute only applies to records concerning matter that could bring minor within jurisdiction of the juvenile court); Correctional Services Article, § 3-602 (inmates’ case records), see 86 Opinions of the Attorney General 226 (2001) (protection does not extend to projected release date for mandatory supervision); and Transportation Article, § 16-118(d) (records of Medical Advisory Board are confidential), see 82 Opinions of the Attorney General 111 (1997) (person in interest is entitled to MVA information relating to the person’s fitness to drive, subject to limited exceptions). Tax information is protected under Tax-General Article, § 13-202 and Tax-Property Article, § 1-301. See MacPhail v. Comptroller, 178 Md. App. 115 (2008); Letter of Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Ms. Ann Marie Maloney (Dec. 15, 2004). Disclosure of “medical records” is restricted by the Maryland Confidentiality of Medical Records Act, § 4-301 et seq. of the Health-General Article. See 90 Opinions of the Attorney General 45, 48-52 (2005). Under GP § 10-615(2)(i), statutes of this kind bar disclosure despite the otherwise broad right of access given by the PIA. See, e.g., 81 Opinions of the Attorney General 164 (1996) (applying statutory accountant-client privilege).

2. Federal Statutes

Similarly, a federal statute or regulation may prevent disclosure of a record. For example, the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 (FERPA) restricts access to student records. See 92 Opinions of the Attorney General 137 (2007); Letter of Assistant Attorney General Robert N. McDonald to Delegate William A. Bronrott \(March 3, 2010\) \(FERPA regulations permit disclosure of University determination that a student committed a crime of violence or non-forcible sex offense.\). Also, states must limit disclosure of information concerning food stamp applicants. 7 U.S.C. § 2020(e)(8). Certain critical infrastructure information and homeland security information that the federal government shares with the State or local governments may not be disclosed under the PIA. See 6 U.S.C. §§ 133(a)(1)(E) and 482(e), respectively. These exceptions are basically statements of the federal preemption doctrine. See 94 Opinions of the Attorney General 44, 46-64 (2009); 88 Opinions of the Attorney General 205 (2003) (addressing confidentiality of medical records under HIPAA and State law). In some instances, a federal prohibition against disclosure that is a condition of federal funding is effective only if the State has “accepted” that condition. See Chicago Tribune Co. v. University of Illinois Board of Trustees, 781 F. Supp. 2d 672 (N.D. Ill. 2011).

3. Court Rules

A rule adopted by the Court of Appeals or order of a court of record can also prevent disclosure of a record. A court rule fitting this description is Maryland Rule 4-642, which requires court records pertaining to criminal investigations to be sealed and protects against disclosure of matters occurring before a grand jury. Office of the State Prosecutor v. Judicial Watch, Inc., 356 Md. 118 (1999) (discussing Rule 4-642). Similarly, the Maryland Rules require that a search warrant be issued “with all practicable secrecy.” A public official or employee who improperly discloses search warrant information prematurely may be prosecuted for contempt. Rule 4-601; 87 Opinions of the Attorney General 76 (2002) (absent court order, State’s Attorney’s Office may not make available to a community association the address and date of execution of a search warrant relating to drug violations for community association’s use in bringing a drug nuisance abatement action if information has not otherwise been made public). Another example of a court order that would fall within this exception is an order to seal records in a divorce or custody case.

A rule that permits limited disclosure does not necessarily open a record to the public. For example, Rule 16-723(f)(3) permits Bar Counsel to disclose to a complainant, on request, the status of an investigation and any disciplinary or remedial proceedings resulting from information from the complainant. In interpreting a predecessor to the current rule, the Court of Appeals held that, although it allows limited disclosure to the complainant, it does not make the information subject to general disclosure under the PIA. Attorney Grievance Commission v. A.S. Abell Co., 294 Md. 680 (1982).

The Court of Appeals has adopted rules governing access to various categories of court records. Md. Rule 16-1001 et seq. The rules define four classes of court records: administrative records, business license records, notice records, and case records. Rule 16-1001. Inspection of notice records (e.g., records filed among the land records by the clerk of a circuit court) may not be denied once the record is recorded and indexed. Rule 16-1004(a). Generally, access to administrative and business licensing records is governed by the provisions in the PIA itself. Rule 16-1004(b)(1). Access to case records is addressed in Rules 16-1005 through 16-1007. A person who files a case record is to inform the record custodian (e.g., a court clerk) in writing whether, in the person's judgment, any part of the case record or information in the case record is confidential under the rules. The custodian is not bound by the person's determination. However, the custodian is entitled to rely on a person's failure to identify information in a case record as confidential under the rules. Rule 16-1010(a). On request for inspection of a record, the custodian may seek a preliminary judicial determination on whether the record is subject to inspection. Rule 16-1011. A person who filed a case record before October 1, 2004 – the date the rules took effect – may advise the custodian whether any part of the record is not subject to inspection. Rule 16-1010(b)(2). For a reported decision applying the rules, see State v. WBAL-TV, 187 Md. App. 135 (2009).

The court rules generally allow access to electronic records to the same degree that the records are available in paper form. However, a statute enacted in 2010 prohibits the display of social security numbers or driver license numbers on court websites, even if those identifiers would be available for inspection in the paper records. Courts & Judicial Proceedings Article § 1-205.

4. Privileges

The “privileged or confidential by law” exception under GP § 4-301(1) refers to traditional privileges like the attorney-client privilege and the doctrine of grand jury secrecy. For example, the Court of Appeals held that a public defender who was the custodian of a public record consisting of client information must disclose the requested information unless, in doing so, the lawyer would violate Rule 1.6 of the Rules of Professional Conduct. That is, if the requested public record was “information relating to representation of a client” under Rule 1.6, and disclosure would place the attorney in violation of the rule, then the record would be considered confidential under GP § 4-301(1). Harris v. Baltimore Sun Co., 330 Md. 595 (1993). While records subject to the attorney-client privilege must be protected under GP § 4-301(1), the privilege may be waived by the party entitled to assert it. Caffrey v. Dep’t. of Liquor Control for Montgomery County, 370 Md. 272, 304 (2002) (Montgomery County Charter provision effectuated limited waiver of attorney-client privilege); see also 64 Opinions of the Attorney General 236 (1979) (applying common law doctrine of grand jury secrecy).

Another example of information protected by a recognized privilege is confidential executive communications of an advisory or deliberative nature. See Stromberg Metal Works, Inc. v. University of Maryland, 382 Md. 151, 161-63 (2004); Office of the Governor v. Washington Post Co., 360 Md. 520 (2000); Hamilton v. Verdow, 287 Md. 544 (1980); Laws v. Thompson, 78 Md. App. 665, 690-93 (1989); 66 Opinions of the Attorney General 98 (1981). The Court of Appeals has stated that the executive privilege encompassed within GP § 4-301(1) shields records made in connection with the deliberative decision-making process used by high executive officials such as the Governor and the Governor’s immediate advisors – although the actual custodian of the records may be someone other than the official holding the privilege. Stromberg, 382 Md. at 161-63. The executive privilege encompassed within GP § 4-301(1) is not limited to the executive branch of government; it extends to the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals and presiding officers of the General Assembly as well. Hamilton v. Verdow, 287 Md. 544, 553-54 n.3 (1980). Records that reveal the deliberative process of other government officials may be protected under a broader common law deliberative process privilege that is encompassed by the discretionary inter and intra-agency exemption in GP § 4-344. Stromberg, 382 Md. at 163-67; see Part D.1 of this Chapter below.

Not every executive communication is itself advisory or deliberative. In Office of the Governor, the Court of Appeals rejected a blanket claim of executive privilege for telephone and scheduling records sought by the newspaper. Because these documents were not of an advisory or deliberative nature, the Governor was not entitled to a presumptive privilege. However, the Court instructed the trial court on remand to consider whether individual records were privileged because disclosure of particular phone numbers or scheduling records in “identified special circumstances” would interfere with the deliberative process of the Governor’s office. The Court recognized that the passage of time might mitigate any harmful effect disclosure might have on the current deliberations of the executive. 360 Md. at 561-65.

The Speech and Debate Privilege provided to legislators by the Maryland Constitution may also prohibit disclosure of records of legislators and a legislative agency. See Maryland Constitution, Article III, § 18; Declaration of Rights, Article 10; Letter from Assistant Attorney General Richard E. Israel to William Ratchford (June 29, 1993). Although the constitutional protections applicable to State legislators do not extend to members of county or municipal governing bodies, those officials do possess a common law privilege when acting in a legislative capacity that is considered co-extensive in scope. Montgomery County v. Schooley, 97 Md. App. 107, 114-15 (1993); see Letter of Assistant Attorney General Richard E. Israel to Senator David R. Craig (March 4, 1998); see also Part D1 of this Chapter, addressing inter- and intra-agency memoranda, below, and Purtilo v. Dwyer, Case No. 269262-v (Circuit Court for Montgomery County, April 24, 2006) (discussing PIA action against State legislators).

5. Local Ordinances and Agency Regulations

An ordinance enacted by a local government does not constitute other “law” for purposes of § 4-301(1) and cannot by itself supply a basis for withholding a public record otherwise available under the PIA. Police Patrol Security Systems v. Prince George’s County, 378 Md. 702, 710, 713-15 (2003); see also 86 Opinions of the Attorney General 94, 106-07 (2001). However, a confidentiality provision in a local ordinance that is derived from a State statute can be a basis for denying access to records. See 92 Opinions of the Attorney General 12 (2007) (confidentiality provision in local ethics ordinance based on model ordinance under the Public Ethics Law).

Conversely, local law may not authorize release of a public record if disclosure is expressly prohibited by the PIA. Police Patrol Security Systems, 378 Md. at 712; see also Caffrey v. Dep't. of Liquor Control for Montgomery County, 370 Md. 272, 303 (2002). An exception would be where a local law required disclosure in a manner authorized by a State statute other than the PIA. See, e.g., 71 Opinions of the Attorney General 282 (1986) (financial disclosures pursuant to county ethics ordinance). However, local law might affect access to public records that are subject to discretionary exemptions under Part IV. Thus, “home rule counties may direct or guide the exercise of this discretion, or even eliminate it entirely, by local enactment.” Police Patrol Security Systems, 378 Md. at 712; see also Caffey, 370 Md. at 305 (permissible denials of PIA subject to waiver by county). The same rule would apply to enactments of municipal corporations. 86 Opinions of the Attorney General 94, 107 (2001) (municipal ordinance, if construed as a blanket prohibition on disclosure of certain records, would thwart the purpose of the PIA).

Nor may an agency regulation provide an independent basis for withholding a public record (except for the special case of “sociological data,” discussed in Part C.1 of this Chapter, below). A contrary interpretation would allow State agencies at their election to undermine the Act. Cf. Public Citizen Health Research Group v. FDA, 704 F.2d 1280 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (for this reason, the court gave little weight to a FDA regulation broadly interpreting the “trade secret” exemption). Additionally, had the General Assembly intended to give this effect to a State regulation, it would have been included in the list in GP § 4-301, which does mention federal regulations.

B. Required Denials— Specific Records

Under Subtitle 3, Part II the custodian must deny the inspection of certain specified records. However, any of these records may be available for inspection if “otherwise provided by law.” GP § 4-304. Thus, if another source of law allows access, then an exception in Part II does not control. See Comptroller of the Treasury v. Immanuel, 216 Md. App. 259, 273 (2014) (financial information that would otherwise be exempt from disclosure under the PIA must be provided when the Abandoned Property Act independently requires disclosure); 79 Opinions of the Attorney General 366 (1994) (although personnel records and other information regarding employees in Baltimore City School System would otherwise be nondisclosable, disclosure was authorized by virtue of a federal district court order). Subpoenas might also serve as “other law” capable of overriding a specific exemption under the Act, although the Court has never addressed the issue or explored the extent to which different types of subpoenas might have different compulsive effect. See Fields v. State, 432 Md. 650, 677-79 (2013) (McDonald, J. concurring); see also pp. 3-44 to 3-46 below (discussing interplay between civil discovery and the PIA).

The converse is also true: Part II may allow access to records, but “other law” may deny access. For example, names, addresses, and phone numbers of students may be disclosed to an organization such as a PTA under GP § 4-313(b)(1)(i). However, the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, 20 U.S.C. § 1232g (also known as the “Buckley Amendment,” or by its acronym FERPA), is “other law” that supersedes the PIA. Under this federal statute, a student or parent may refuse to allow the student’s name and address to be released by refusing to allow it to be classified as directory information. If they do not refuse, the name and address are considered directory information and may be released. As to the types of records protected under the Buckley Amendment, see Kirwan v. The Diamondback, 352 Md. 74, 89-94 (1998) (federal statute governing “education records” does not cover records of parking tickets or correspondence between the NCAA and the University of Maryland, College Park Campus); cf. Zaal v. State, 326 Md. 54 (1992) (Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act and Maryland regulations concerning the disclosure of student records do not exclude a student’s education records from discovery in litigation).

The following categories of records are listed in Subtitle 3, Part II:

1. Adoption and Welfare Records

Under GP §§ 4-305 and 4-307, adoption records and welfare records, respectively, on an individual person are protected. See 71 Opinions of the Attorney General 368 (1986) (discussing limited conditions under which information about the handling of a child abuse case by a local department of social services may be disclosed); see also 89 Opinions of the Attorney General 31, 43 & n.7 (2004).

2. Library Circulation Records

Under GP § 4-308, public library circulation records that identify the transaction of a borrower are protected. See Letter from Assistant Attorney General Richard E. Israel to Delegate John J. Bishop (Feb. 28, 1990) (FBI agents may not inspect library records unless acting pursuant to a lawfully issued search warrant or subpoena). However, another statute may provide authority for a search absent a warrant or subpoena. See 50 U.S.C. § 1861 (authority of FBI to obtain order under USA Patriot Act for production of records in connection with certain foreign intelligence and internal terrorism investigations).

3. Letters of Reference

Under GP § 4-310, letters of reference are protected. This exemption applies to all letters, solicited or unsolicited, that concern a person's fitness for public office or employment. 68 Opinions of the Attorney General 335 (1983). The Court of Appeals has left open the question whether a record, memorandum, or notes reflecting a telephone conversation or meeting to obtain information about a prospective appointee might come under the exception. However, a record simply indicating that a telephone conversation or meeting occurred about a prospective appointee is "certainly not a 'letter of reference.'" Office of the Governor v. Washington Post Co., 360 Md. 520, 547 (2000).

4. Personnel Records

Under GP § 4-311, "personnel records" of an individual are protected; however, such records are available to the person who is the subject of the record and to the officials who supervise that person. An agency may not generally share personnel records with other agencies; however, it is implicit in the personnel records exemption that another agency charged with responsibilities related to personnel administration may have access to those records to the extent necessary to carry out its duties. 86 Opinions of the Attorney General 94, 108-09 (2001).

The PIA does not define "personnel records," but it does indicate the type of documents that are covered: applications, performance ratings, scholastic achievement information. "Although this list was probably not intended to be exhaustive, it does reflect a legislative intent that 'personnel records' means those documents that directly pertain to employment and an employee's ability to perform a job." Kirwan v. The Diamondback, 352 Md. 74, 82-84 (1998) (rejecting argument that information concerning parking tickets constitutes personnel record). Accordingly, the category includes records "relating to hiring, discipline, promotion, dismissal, or any other matter involving an employee's status." Montgomery County v. Shropshire, 420 Md. 362, 378 (2011). As to the specific type of records that are protected, see 420 Md. at 381 (records of police internal affairs unit related to alleged violations of administrative law were related to employee discipline and therefore personnel records not accessible by county inspector general under the PIA); Baltimore City Police Dept v. State, 158 Md. App. 274, 282-83 (2004) (investigation of employee misconduct is personnel record); 79 Opinions of the Attorney General 362 (1994) (information related to performance evaluation of judges is not disclosable); 78 Opinions of the Attorney General 291 (1993) (information about a complaint filed against an employee is not disclosable); see also Memorandum from Assistant Attorney General Jack Schwartz to Principal Counsel (Jan. 31, 1995) (information about leave balances is itself considered part of an official's personnel records and therefore is not disclosable); cf. Dobronksi v. FCC, 17 F.3d 275 (9th Cir. 1994) (sick leave records of an assistant bureau chief for FCC were "personnel files" under FOIA Exemption 6 but were disclosable because of that exemption's balancing test, not found in Maryland's personnel exception). "The obvious purpose of [GP § 4-311] is to preserve the privacy of personal information about a public employee that is accumulated during his or her employment." 65 Opinions of the Attorney General 365, 367 (1980); see also 82 Opinions of the Attorney General 65, 68 (1997); 68 Opinions of the Attorney General 335, 338 (1983).

A record is not a "personnel record" simply because it mentions an employee or has some incidental connection with an employment relationship. For example, a record simply indicating with whom an official met or a phone number called in connection with a possible future employment decision is not a personnel record under the PIA. Office of the Governor v. Washington Post Co., 360 Md. 520, 547-48 (2000). Nor is directory-type information concerning agency employees a "personnel record" under GP § 4-311. Prince George's County v. The Washington Post Co., 149 Md. App. 289, 324 (2003) (roster listing names, ranks, badge numbers, dates of hire, and job assignments of county police officers not exempt from disclosure as "personnel records"). Furthermore, an employment contract, setting out the terms and conditions governing a public employee's entitlement to a salary, is not a "personnel record." University System of Maryland v. The Baltimore Sun Co., 381 Md. 79, 101-02 (2004); Letter of Assistant Attorney General Robert A. Zarnoch to Delegate Joanne Parrott (Feb. 9, 2004). Nor is a description of a job or position considered to be a "personnel record." Attorney General Opinion 77-006 (Jan. 13, 1977) (unpublished). Generally, a record generated by an agency that lacks supervisory authority over an employee would not qualify as a “personnel record.” Prince George’s County v. The Washington Post Company, 149 Md. App. at 331 (records of county human relations commission that provided recommendations to supervisory agency following public hearings on alleged police misconduct).

In some contexts – particularly where an agency has a special duty to inform the public – different distinctions may need to be made as to the nature of information. For example, in assessing what a public school may or should disclose to parents about an inappropriate relationship between a teacher and student, a 1982 opinion observed that first-hand observation or information contained in an oral report to the school was not a “personnel record” because it was not a “record.” Also, student-related information in documentary material about the teacher may be disclosed without destroying the confidentiality of employee-related information. See 82 Opinions of the Attorney General 65, 67-70 (1997). On the other hand, documents generated by a complaint about court clerks’ conduct did fall within the exception. 78 Opinions of the Attorney General 291, 293 (1993).

Records that, if unredacted, qualify as “personnel record[s] of an individual” for purposes of GP § 4-311 may lose that status once “all identifying information” is redacted. Maryland State Police v. NAACP, 430 Md. 179, 195 (2013) (State Police must disclose records reflecting the agency’s investigation of all complaints of racial profiling). What constitutes “identifying information,” however, will depend on the specifics of each request. For example, the agency may disclose records in response to a general, programmatic request of the sort at issue in Maryland State Police v. NAACP simply by redacting the names, titles, or other identifying information of the personnel involved. See Fether v. Frederick County, Civil No. CCB-12-1674 (D. Md., March 19, 2014) (“statistical information” available under NAACP); Shriner v. Annapolis City Police Department, Civil No. ELH-11-2633 (D. Md., March 19, 2012) (“aggregated data”). By contrast, no amount of redaction will enable an agency to comply with a request for the personnel records of a specific State employee because, even if “identifying information” is redacted, the documents provided would still constitute the personnel records of the individual who is the subject of the request. See Maryland Dep’t of State Police v. Dashiell, 443 Md. 435 (2015). Requests that lie between these extremes will require the custodian to determine what amount of redaction, if any, is necessary to ensure that the record released cannot be identified as the “personnel record of an individual.” See, e.g., Judicial Watch, Inc. v. U.S. Dep’t of Justice, Civil No. 13-0949 (D.D.C., May 12, 2014) (upholding non-disclosure of emails under FOIA exemption 6 when, due to the small number of people involved, releasing even redacted versions “could easily lead” to the revelation of exempt material); see also 90 Opinions of the Attorney General 45, 54-55 (2005) (even with the name redacted, the medical information in an ambulance event report might still be “about an individual” if the unredacted information “sharply narrows” the class of individuals to whom the information might apply or “likely” could be used to identify the individual with “reasonable certainty”).

The personnel record exception is not limited to paid officials and employees; biographical information submitted by individuals seeking to serve on agency advisory committees is also protected. See Letters from Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Senator Brian E. Frosh and Delegate Jennie M. Forehand (Oct. 6, 2000). Similarly, the names of those seeking appointment to an office may not be disclosed if the information is derived from their applications. Letter from Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Senator Leo E. Green (May 13, 2002) (names of applicants for Prince George’s Board of Education not to be disclosed).

Records regarding the salaries, bonuses, and the amount of a monetary performance award of public employees may not be withheld as personnel records. 83 Opinions of the Attorney General 192 (1998). On the other hand, information concerning the specific benefits choices made by specific employees must be withheld because those benefit elections are exempt from disclosure under the PIA as personnel records (GP § 4-311) and records of an individual’s finances (GP § 4-336(b)). Benefits choices made by an individual employee can reveal information about the employee’s family circumstances and medical needs, as well as disclose personal financial decisions. The federal personnel regulations similarly allow for disclosure of salary, but not benefits selection information, in response to a request under FOIA. See 5 C.F.R. § 293.311.

On occasion, the question has arisen whether the death or termination of an employee affects access to personnel records concerning the employee. Although there is no case law on this question, the exception does not expressly distinguish between personnel records of live or current employees and those of employees who have died or moved on to other endeavors. This suggests, then, that the personnel records of former employees do not receive less protection than those of current employees. And the fact that the PIA defines “person in interest” to include a parent or legal representative of an individual with a legal disability, GP § 4-101(g), suggests that cessation of employment does not affect the applicability of the exception. With regard to personal information in other types of documents, such as investigative files, the federal courts have noted that an individual’s death might diminish, but does not eliminate, the individual’s privacy interest. See Clemente v. FBI, 741 F. Supp. 2d 64, 68 (D.D.C. 2010).

5. Retirement Records

Under GP § 4-312, retirement files or records are protected. This section, however, includes several exceptions. Under subsection (d)(1), a custodian must state whether an individual receives a pension or retirement allowance. The law also requires the disclosure of specified information concerning the retirement benefits of current and retired appointed and elected officials. See GP § 4-312(d)(2). Specific provisions are applicable to Anne Arundel County officials. See GP § 4-312(e). Note that subparagraph (b)(1)(v) requires a custodian to permit inspection of retirement files or records if a county by law requires an agency to conduct audits of such records. The employees of the auditing agency must keep all information confidential and must not disclose information that would identify the individuals whose files have been inspected. Retirement records may also be inspected by public employee organizations under conditions outlined in § 21-504 or 21-505 of the State Personnel and Pensions Article. See GP § 4-312(c). The law also allows the sharing of certain information for purposes of administering the State’s optional defined contribution system in accordance with § 21-505 of the State Personnel and Pensions Article. See GP § 4-312(c). A law enforcement agency seeking the home address of a retired employee is entitled to inspect retirement records in order to contact that person on official business. GP § 4-312(b)(iv). Other exceptions authorize access by a person in interest, an employee’s appointing authority, and certain persons involved in administering a deceased individual’s estate. Id.

6. Student Records

Under GP § 4-313, school district records pertaining to individual students are protected; however, these records are available to the student and to officials who supervise the student. The custodian may allow inspection of students' home addresses and phone numbers by organizations such as parent, student, or teacher organizations, by a military organization or force, by an agent of a school or board of education seeking to confirm an address or phone number, and by a representative of a community college in the State. See Letter from Assistant Attorney General Christine Steiner to Senator Victor Cushwa (Aug. 14, 1984) (names and addresses of parents of Senatorial Scholarship recipients may not be released; the PIA protects school district records about the family of a student). Even if some identifying information is stripped from the student records, the exemption would still apply if a person could readily match students with the disclosed files. Letter from Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Delegate Dereck Davis (Aug. 20, 2004). This exception may be trumped by other federal or State law that permits access to student records. 92 Opinions of the Attorney General 137, 146 (2007) (county auditor could have access to student records to the extent allowed by State statute authorizing audit).

A separate exception for student records at institutions of higher education is contained in GP § 4-355. See p. 3-42 below.

7. Police Reports Sought for Marketing Legal Services

Under GP § 4-315, police reports of traffic accidents, criminal charging documents, and traffic citations are not available for inspection by an attorney or an employee of an attorney who requests inspection for the purpose of soliciting or marketing legal services. See also Business Occupations & Professions Article, § 10-604. The federal district court in Maryland has ruled that this provision is of doubtful constitutionality under the First Amendment. Ficker v. Utz, Civil No. WN-92-1466 (D. Md. Sept. 20, 1992) (order denying motion to dismiss).

Subsequently, some courts have upheld state efforts to restrict access to similar public information when sought for commercial purposes while other courts have struck down such restrictions. See Letter from Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Delegate John A. Giannetti, Jr. (Feb. 28, 2000); see also Los Angeles Police Department v. United Reporting Publishing Corporation, 528 U.S. 32 (1999) (rejecting facial challenge to a California statute that restricts access to the addresses of individuals arrested for purposes of selling a product or service).

In 2008, the General Assembly amended the Maryland Lawyers Act to forbid non-lawyers from accessing an accident report for the purpose of soliciting a person to sue another. Business Occupations & Professions Article § 10-604(b)(2). The Attorney General's Office found that such a provision is constitutional. See Letter from Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Senator Brian E. Frosh \(April 1, 2008\).

8. Arrest Warrants

Subject to enumerated exceptions, under GP § 4-316, a record pertaining to an arrest warrant is not open to inspection until the warrant has been served or 90 days have elapsed since the warrant was issued. An arrest warrant issued pursuant to a grand jury indictment or conspiracy investigation is not open to inspection until warrants for any co-conspirator have been served.

9. Motor Vehicle Administration Records

Under GP § 4-320(e), absent written consent of the person in interest, the Motor Vehicle Administration may not disclose "personal information" in response to a request for an individual record or as part of a list sought for purposes of marketing, solicitations, or surveys. "Personal information" is defined as "information that identifies an individual including an individual's address, driver's license number or any other identification number, medical or disability information, name, photograph or computer generated image, Social Security number, or telephone number." GP § 4-101(h). However, this definition does not include an individual's "driver's status," "driving offenses," "5-digit zip code," or "information on vehicular accidents." GP § 4-101(h)(3). The statute includes an extensive list of exceptions whereby personal information must be disclosed. The exceptions are modeled in large part after provisions of the federal Driver's Privacy Protection Act, 18 U.S.C. § 2721 et seq. The Motor Vehicle Administration may not disclose personal information under any circumstances for purposes of "telephone solicitation," a term defined in the PIA. GP § 4-320(a).

10. RBC Records Filed with Insurance Commissioner

Under GP § 4-323, records that relate to Risk Based Capital reports or plans are protected. All Risk Based Capital reports and Risk Based Capital plans filed with the Insurance Commissioner are to be kept confidential by the Commissioner, because they constitute confidential commercial information that might be damaging to an insurer if made available to competitors. These records may not be made public or subject to subpoena, other than by the Commissioner, and then only for the purpose of enforcement actions under the Insurance Code. See Insurance Article, § 4-310.

11. Miscellaneous Records

Other public records protected under Part II include:

- Hospital records relating to medical administration, medical staff, medical care, or other medical information and containing information about one or more individuals, GP § 4-306;
- Library, archives, and museum material contributed by a private person to the extent that any limitation of disclosure is a condition of the contribution, GP § 4-309;
- Account holders and beneficiaries under the State's College Savings Plans program, GP § 4-314;
- Department of Natural Resources' records containing personal information about the owner of a registered vessel, GP § 4-317;
- Certain records created or obtained by or submitted to the Maryland Transit Administration in connection with electronic fare media, GP § 4-318;
- Certain records created or obtained by or submitted to the Maryland Transportation Authority in connection with an electronic toll collection system or an associated transaction system, GP § 4-319;
- Recorded images produced by systems used to monitor compliance with traffic control signals, speed limits, or certain vehicle height restrictions, GP § 4-321;
- Applications for certification and claims for credits filed under the Renewable Fuels Promotion Act of 2005, GP § 4-324;

- Records relating to persons authorized to sell, purchase, rent, or transfer regulated firearms, or to carry, wear, or transport a handgun, GP § 4-325; and
- License plate numbers and other data collected by or derived from certain automatic license plate reader systems, GP § 4-326.

C. Required Denials — Specific Information

Under Subtitle 3, Part III, unless otherwise provided by law, the custodian must deny inspection of the part of a public record that contains the following specific information:

1. Medical, Psychological, and Sociological Data

GP § 4-329(b) prevents disclosure of medical or psychological information about an individual person, as well as personal information about a person with a disability. The exception also explicitly makes confidential certain reports that local health departments receive from physicians who diagnose cases of HIV or AIDS. GP § 4-329(b)(3).

Thus, medical information such as the symptoms of an ill or injured individual recorded during a call to 911 to assist in dispatch of emergency personnel is not to be released. 90 Opinions of the Attorney General 45 (2005). A record containing medical information need not identify an individual with absolute precision to fall within this exception, if other unredacted information permits identification of the individual with reasonable certainty. Id. at 54-55. Medical and psychological information is available for inspection by the person in interest to the extent permitted by Title 4, Subtitle 3 of the Health-General Article. See 71 Opinions of the Attorney General 297 (1986) (tape recording of involuntary admission hearing may be disclosed only to a patient or authorized representative). GP § 4-329 does not protect from disclosure autopsy reports of a medical examiner, but does protect photographs and other documents developed in connection with an autopsy. Letter from Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Senator Leo E. Green (May 30, 2003).

The exemption for personal information about an individual with a disability, which was added to the PIA in 2006, is apparently intended to restrict disclosure of addresses of community residences and group homes that serve individuals with disabilities. See Bill Review Letter of Attorney General J. Joseph Curran, Jr. to Governor Robert L. Ehrlich concerning House Bill 1625 and Senate Bill 1040 (May 1, 2006). An exception in the exemption related to nursing homes and assisted living facilities has raised interpretive questions. Id.

Section 4-330 forbids disclosure of “sociological information.” This basis for denial may be used only if an official custodian has adopted rules or regulations that define, for the records within that official’s responsibility, the meaning and scope of “sociological data.” The Division of Parole and Probation of the Department of Public Safety and Correctional Services, for example, has adopted regulations (COMAR 12.11.02.02B(13)) that define “sociological data.” While the Act itself does not define “sociological data,” it seems unlikely that the Legislature intended to authorize agencies to withhold aggregate statistical compilations under this provision.

2. Home Addresses and Phone Numbers of Public Employees

GP § 4-331 prevents disclosure of the home address or telephone number of a public employee unless the employee consents or the employing unit determines that inspection is needed to protect the public interest. Thus, the home telephone number of a State employee would be redacted from records otherwise available to a requestor. See Office of the Governor v. Washington Post Co., 360 Md. 520, 550 (2000). Public employee organizations are permitted greater access under certain conditions outlined in § 3-208 and § 21-504 of the State Personnel and Pensions Article. Also, if a public employee is a licensee, members of the General Assembly may obtain the licensee’s home address pursuant to GP § 4-103(c). See Letter from Assistant Attorney General Robert A. Zarnoch to Michael A. Noonan, Esquire (Dec., 1993); Letters from Assistant Attorney General Robert A. Zarnoch to Dr. William AuMiller (Feb. 21, 2005; Nov. 29, 2000) (State legislators are entitled to names and addresses of teachers and other certified employees of county boards of education).

3. Occupational and Professional Licensing Records

GP § 4-333 contains a general privacy protection for occupational and professional licensing records on individual persons. This amendment resulted from a recommendation of the Governor’s Information Practices Commission. In explaining its recommendation, the Commission stated:

The observation was made earlier in this report that the formulation of sound public policy in the area of information practices requires the striking of a delicate balance among competing interests. The occupational and professional licensing field provides a good illustration of this dictum. The various licensing boards throughout the State need to collect a sufficient amount of personally identifiable information in order to assess the qualifications of candidates. The public has a right to examine certain items in licensure files to be assured that specific licensees are competent and qualified. Licensees, in turn, have a right to expect that boards limit themselves to the collection of relevant and necessary information, and that strict limitations are placed on the type of personally identifiable data available for public inspection.

The Information Practices Commission has invested a considerable amount of time and energy in attempting to determine which data elements pertinent to licensees should be available for the public, and which items should be confidential. The Commission believes that its recommendations constitute a careful balancing of the access rights of the public and the privacy rights of licensees. The Commission asserts that the public has a right to have access to basic directory information about a licensee, should it need to contact the licensee. The Commission believes, however, that under usual circumstances, the business address and business telephone number should be disclosed rather than residential data. If, however, the board cannot furnish the business address, it should make the licensee's home address available to the public. The Commission furthermore asserts that the public has a right to examine a licensee's educational and occupational background and professional qualifications. Before hiring a plumber, for example, an individual should have the right to assess the plumber's credentials as presented to the Department of Licensing and Regulation. The Commission also believes that the public has a right to know the nature of non-pending complaints directed to boards against specific licensees. If a board has determined that a licensee was guilty or culpable of some unfair or illegal practice and subsequently took disciplinary action against that licensee, the public has a right to know that as well. Finally, if a licensee is required by statute to provide evidence of financial responsibility, that evidence should also be available for public inspection. This latter issue is of particular importance in the home improvement field.

The Commission does not believe that the release of other personally identifiable information pertinent to licensees would serve the public interest The Commission recognizes that there may be extenuating circumstances in which a compelling public purpose would be served by the release of data in addition to that recommended by the Commission. The Commission believes that discretionary authority should be given to records' custodians to release additional data; however, custodians should be required to issue rules and regulations explaining the need and the basis for disclosure.

Governor's Information Practices Commission, Final Report 535-38 (1982). The Department of Labor, Licensing, and Regulation has concluded that "a compelling public interest" is served by disclosure of, among other information, the number, nature, and status of complaints against a licensee, if the requester is contemplating a contract with the licensee. COMAR 09.01.04.13. As noted above, this exemption applies to licensees who are individuals and not to business entities. 71 Opinions of the Attorney General 305, 311 (1986). A 2006 amendment of the exemption limits disclosure of the home address of a licensee if the location is identified as the home address of an individual with a disability.

4. Trade Secrets; Confidential Business and Financial Information

GP § 4-335 prevents disclosure of trade secrets, confidential commercial or financial information, and confidential geological or geophysical information, if that information is furnished by or obtained from any person or governmental unit. The comparable FOIA exemptions are similar. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4) (protecting "[t]rade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential”); § 552(b)(9) (protecting “geological and geophysical information and data, including maps concerning wells”). The geological or geophysical data provision obviously is limited in scope and in practice applies only to a few Maryland agencies.

Federal cases and FOIA legislative history are highly persuasive in interpreting what is now GP § 4-335. See 63 Opinions of the Attorney General 355 (1978). Sources on the scope and extent of the related FOIA exemption include: United States Department of Justice, Freedom of Information Act Guide & Privacy Act Overview, Exemption 4 (available on-line as Freedom of Information Act Guide, www.justice.gov/oip/foi-act.htm); O’Reilly, Federal Information Disclosure, Chapters 14 and 18 (3d ed. 2000); 139 A.L.R. Fed. 225; and 27 A.L.R. 4th 773. Under FOIA, a “trade secret” is considered a “secret, commercially valuable plan, formula, process, or device that is used for the making, preparing, compounding, or processing of trade commodities and that can be said to be the end product of either innovation or substantial effort.” Prince George’s County v. Washington Post Co., 149 Md. App. 289, 312, n.17 (2003) (citing Public Citizen Health Research Group v. FDA, 704 F.2d 1280, 1288 (D.C. Cir. 1983)); see also 63 Opinions of the Attorney General at 359 (defining a “trade secret” as “an unpatented secret formula or process known only to certain individuals using it in compounding some article of trade having commercial value. Secrecy is the essential element. Thus, [a] trade secret is something known to only one or a few, kept from the general public, and not susceptible of general knowledge. If the principles incorporated in a device are known to the industry, there is no trade secret” (footnotes, internal quotations, and citations omitted)).

Often the more difficult inquiry is what constitutes confidential commercial or financial information. To fit within GP § 4-335, the information must be of a commercial or financial nature and it must be obtained from a person outside the agency or from another governmental unit. Information generated by the agency itself is not covered by GP § 4-335, but it may be protected from disclosure by a different exception. See Stromberg Metal Works, Inc. v. University of Maryland, 382 Md. 151, 167-70 (2004); Federal Open Market Committee v. Merrill, 443 U.S. 340 (1979).

In addition, a record is not confidential commercial or financial information simply because it was generated in the course of a transaction or has some other indirect connection to commercial activity. In Office of the Governor v. Washington Post Co., for example, the Court of Appeals held that a record of a telephone call about an economic development project does not itself constitute confidential commercial information, although notes detailing the substance of the discussion might. 360 Md. 520, 549 (2000).

The problem of determining whether a document reflects confidential commercial or financial information frequently arises as a consequence of procurement bid protests. The following cases that apply FOIA Exemption 4 may be helpful in this context: Canadian Commercial Corp. v. Department of the Air Force, 514 F.3d 37 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (line item pricing exempt because disclosure could cause substantial harm to competitive position of contractor); Worthington Compressors, Inc. v. Costle, 662 F.2d 45 (D.C. Cir. 1981) (substantial cost savings to competitors through FOIA access to data may result in substantial competitive harm to data submitter); Orion Research Inc. v. EPA, 615 F.2d 551 (1st Cir. 1980) (disclosure of bid proposal would have chilling effect on willingness of potential bidders to submit future proposals); Gulf & Western Industries, Inc. v. United States, 615 F.2d 527 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (ability of competitors to calculate data submitter's future bids and pricing structure would cause substantial competitive harm); Environmental Technology, Inc. v. EPA, 822 F. Supp. 1226 (E.D. Va. 1993) (unit price information voluntarily provided by government contractor to procuring agency was "confidential" and not subject to disclosure under FOIA, where information was of a kind that contractor would not customarily share with competitors); Allnet Comm. Services, Inc. v. FCC, 800 F. Supp. 984 (D.D.C. 1992) (proprietary cost and engineering data voluntarily provided by switch vendors to telecommunications companies under nondisclosure agreements were confidential under FOIA); Cohen, Dunn & Sinclair v. General Services Administration, Civ. No. 92-57-A (E.D. Va. Sept. 10, 1992) (pricing information was exempt because of deterrent effect on future bids and because disclosure would result in severe economic harm to some bidders); Audio Technical Services Ltd. v. Department of the Army, 487 F. Supp. 779 (D.D.C. 1979) (successful bidder's customer list, design concepts and recommendations, and biographical data on key employees were exempt). For an overview of the law governing release of price information under FOIA, see McClure, The Treatment of Contract Prices Under the Trade Secrets Act and Freedom of Information Act Exemption 4: Are Contract Prices Really Trade Secrets?, 31 Public Contract Law Journal 185 (2002).

Financial or commercial information that persons are required to give the government should be considered confidential if disclosure of the information is likely:

- (1) to impair the government's ability to obtain the necessary information in the future; or
- (2) to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained.

National Parks & Conservation Assoc. v. Morton, 498 F.2d 765, 770 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (footnote omitted). Commercial or financial information that is given to the government voluntarily should be considered confidential "if it is of the kind that the provider would not customarily release to the public." Critical Mass Energy Project v. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, 975 F.2d 871 (D.C. Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 984 (1993). In general, the submitter of such material should be consulted before it is disclosed to a requester.

An opinion of the Attorney General concluded that construction drawings, submitted to a county as a prerequisite to issuance of a building permit, could not be protected from disclosure on the grounds that release would impair the government's ability to obtain the necessary information in the future. The opinion suggested that release of such drawings should be examined on a case-by-case basis, however, to determine whether disclosure would give competitors a concrete advantage in obtaining future work on that or a similar project. 69 Opinions of the Attorney General 231 (1984); see also Progressive Casualty v. MAIF, No. 83/E/1074 (Cir. Ct. for Balt. Co., Feb. 15, 1984) (coverage and premium calculations of Maryland Automobile Insurance Fund's insureds held to be confidential commercial and financial data).

5. Records of an Individual Person's Finances

GP § 4-336 protects from disclosure the part of a public record that contains information about the finances of an individual, including assets, income, liabilities, net worth, bank balances, financial history or activities, or credit worthiness. GP § 4-336(b). This exception explicitly does not apply to the actual compensation, including any bonus, paid to a public employee. GP § 4-336(a); 83 Opinions of the Attorney General 192 (1998).

Although the PIA does not define financial information, the listing in GP § 4-336(b) illustrates the type of financial information that the Legislature intended to protect. Kirwan v. The Diamondback, 352 Md. 74 (1998) (because the sanction for a parking violation is a fine rather than a debt, records of parking tickets do not fall in the same category as information about “assets, income, liabilities, net worth, bank balances, financial history or activities, or credit worthiness”); see also 77 Opinions of the Attorney General 188 (1992) (value or description of abandoned property should not be disclosed because it constitutes personal financial information); Opinion No. 85-011 (April 15, 1985) (unpublished) (names of municipal bond holders should not be disclosed because they constitute information about a particular financial interest of an individual); Memorandum from Jack Schwartz to Principal Counsel (Aug. 17, 1995) (information that an individual was a lottery winner is considered a record of an individual person’s finances and the Lottery Agency was prohibited from disclosing to the press the individual’s identity); Letter of Assistant Attorney General Robert A. Zarnoch to Delegate Kevin Kelly (July 18, 2007) (public records related to paper gaming profits of businesses in Allegany County not covered by this exception); 71 Opinions of the Attorney General 282 (1986) (county ethics ordinance requires disclosure of information ordinarily non-disclosable under GP § 4-336(b)). The exemption is not limited to the actual value of the asset. Even information that reveals the comparative value of different assets is exempt from disclosure. See Comptroller of the Treasury v. Immanuel, 216 Md. App. 259, 274 (2014) (ranking of assets by value reveals financial information even if absolute values are not disclosed).

The rationale for this exception was explained by the Governor’s Information Practices Commission:

In the performance of their duties, public agencies quite properly collect a significant amount of detailed financial information pertaining to individuals. This data is [sic] essential in determining eligibility for State scholarship programs, income maintenance benefits, subsidized housing programs, and many other areas.

While the Commission recognizes that this data must be available to agencies, this does not mean that such information should be available to third parties

The Commission . . . recommends that an amendment be added to the Public Information Act specifying that personally identifiable data which is financial in character not be disclosed, unless otherwise provided by law. It is important to emphasize the last phrase, “unless otherwise provided by law.” Enactment of the above recommendation would have no impact whatsoever on those personally identifiable financial records which the Legislature has determined should be available for public inspection. For example, the salaries of public employees would continue to be available under the Public Information Act; the Commission completely supports the disclosure of this information. The Commission’s recommendation, therefore, would only affect financial data in those record systems, . . . which have been inadvertently disclosed.

Governor’s Information Practices Commission, Final Report 534-35 (1982).

6. Records Containing Investigatory Procurement Information

GP § 4-337 prohibits the disclosure of any part of a public record that contains procurement information generated by the federal government or another state as a result of an investigation into suspected collusive or anticompetitive activity on the part of a transportation contractor. The reason for the exemption was explained as follows:

The Department of Transportation advises that if it receives the result of an investigation into suspected bid rigging activity on the part of a potential contractor, which investigation was conducted by the federal government or another State, that information is subject to disclosure under the Maryland Public Information Law. As a result, these sources have been unwilling to share this information with Maryland officials.

House Bill 228 would provide assurances to these sources that the information provided to Maryland investigators will remain confidential and not be subject to disclosure. Section 10-617 of the State Government Article, to which the bill is drafted, limits access to a part of a public record. This means that the results of the Maryland investigation would be public information, except for those parts which relate to the information gathered from the confidential sources. As a result, the MDOT will have access to a greater range of information when conducting its own investigation into collusive or anticompetitive activity.

Bill Analysis, House Bill 228 (1994).

7. Names and Addresses of Senior Center Enrollees

GP § 4-340(b) makes confidential the name, address, telephone number, and e-mail address of a member or enrollee of a senior citizen activities center. The statute permits access to the information by the person in interest, as well as law enforcement and emergency services personnel. Such information can also be protected under the exception for sociological information if an agency adopts a regulation defining sociological information. See Letter from Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to Senator Nancy J. King \(Feb. 9, 2011\).

8. Miscellaneous Information

Other public information protected under Part III includes:

- Certain information about the application and commission of a notary public, GP § 4-332;
- Social security numbers provided in applications for marriage licenses or recreational licenses issued under the Fish and Fisheries title of the Natural Resources Article, GP § 4-334;
- Information about security of information systems, GP § 4-338; and
- Information that identifies or contains personal information about a person, including a commercial entity, that maintains an alarm or security system, GP § 4-339.

D. Discretionary Exceptions

Under Subtitle 3, Part IV, a custodian may deny the right of inspection to certain records or parts of records, but only if disclosure would be contrary to the “public interest.” These records are:

- Interagency or intra-agency memoranda or letters that would be privileged in litigation, GP § 4-344;
- Testing records for academic, employment, or licensing examinations, GP § 4-345;
- Specific details of a research project that an institution of the State or of a political subdivision is conducting, GP § 4-346;
- Information relating to an invention owned by a State public institution of higher education, GP § 4-347;
- Information relating to a trade secret, confidential commercial information, or confidential financial information owned by the Maryland Technology Development Corporation or by a public senior higher educational institution, GP § 4-348;
- Contents of a real estate appraisal made for a public agency about a pending acquisition (except from the property owner), GP § 4-349;
- Site-specific location of certain plants, animals, or property, GP § 4-350;
- Records of investigation, intelligence information, security procedures, or investigatory files, GP § 4-351;
- Plans and procedures relating to emergency procedures and records relating to buildings, facilities, and infrastructure, the disclosure of which would jeopardize security, facilitate planning of a terrorist attack, or endanger life or physical safety, GP § 4-352;

- Records reflecting rates for certain services and facilities held by the Maryland Port Administration and research concerning the competitive position of the port, GP § 4-353;
- Records of University of Maryland University College concerning the provision of competitive educational services, GP § 4-354; and
- Records of a public institution of higher education that contain personal information about a student, GP § 4-355.

A “person in interest,” generally the person who is the subject of the record, GP § 4-101(e), has a greater right of access to the information contained in investigation and testing records. GP §§ 4-351 (b) and 4-345(b); see also Chapter II.A, above.

Whether disclosure would be “contrary to the public interest” under these exceptions is in the custodian’s “sound discretion,” to be exercised “only after careful consideration is given to the public interest involved.” 58 Opinions of the Attorney General 563, 566 (1973). In making this determination, the custodian must carefully balance the possible consequences of disclosure against the public interest in favor of disclosure. 64 Opinions of the Attorney General 236, 242 (1979). If the custodian denies access under one of the discretionary exemptions, the custodian must provide “a brief explanation of why the denial is necessary.” GP § 4-203(c)(1)(i)1.

1. Inter- and Intra-Agency Memoranda and Letters

GP § 4-344 allows a custodian to deny inspection of “any part of an interagency or intra-agency letter or memorandum that would not be available by law to a private party in litigation with the unit.” This exemption “to some extent reflects that part of the executive privilege doctrine encompassing letters, memoranda, or similar internal government documents containing confidential opinions, deliberations, advice or recommendations from one governmental employee or official to another for the purpose of assisting the latter official in the decision-making function.” Office of the Governor v. Washington Post Company, 360 Md. 520, 551 (2000); see also 66 Opinions of the Attorney General 98 (1981) (executive agency budget recommendations requested by and submitted to the Governor in confidence are subject to executive privilege). This privilege arose from the common law, the rules of evidence, and the discovery rules for civil proceedings. Stromberg Metal Works, Inc. v. University of Maryland, 382 Md. 151, 163 (2004).

This exception is very close in wording to the FOIA exemption in 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5), and the case law developed under that exemption is persuasive in interpreting GP § 4-344. Stromberg at 382 Md. 163-64; 58 Opinions of the Attorney General 53 (1973). The FOIA exemption is “intended to preserve the process of agency decision-making from the natural muting of free and frank discussion which would occur if each voice of opinion and recommendation could be heard and questioned by the world outside the agency.” 1 O’Reilly, Federal Information Disclosure § 15.01 (3d ed. 2000); see also Stromberg, 382 Md. at 164.

To be an “interagency” or “intra-agency” letter or memorandum, the document must have been “created by government agencies or agents, or by outside consultants called upon by a government agency ‘to assist it in internal decisionmaking.’” Office of the Governor, 360 Md. at 552. Memoranda exchanged with federal agencies or agencies of other states as part of a deliberative process may fall within this exception. Gallagher v. Office of the Attorney General, 141 Md. App. 664, 676 (2001).

This exception does not apply to all agency documents. A document such as a telephone bill or a listing of persons who have appointments with an official cannot be considered a “letter or memorandum” under the “ordinary meaning” of those terms. Office of the Governor, 360 Md. at 552. Nor does the exception apply to all memoranda or letters. For it to apply, the agency must have a reasonable basis for concluding that disclosure would inhibit creative debate and discussion within or among agencies or would impair the integrity of the agency’s decision-making process. NLRB v. Sears, 421 U.S. 132, 151 (1975).

Generally, the exception protects pre-decisional, as opposed to post-decisional, materials. Stromberg, 382 Md. at 165; City of Virginia Beach v. Department of Commerce, 995 F.2d 1247 (4th Cir. 1993); Bristol-Myers Co. v. FTC, 598 F.2d 18, 23 (D.C. Cir. 1978). For example, a State agency’s annual report on waste, fraud, and abuse submitted to the Governor is protected as a pre-decisional document, because it presents the Governor with recommendations for correcting these problems that the Governor may approve or disapprove; it does not reflect agency policy or an agency’s final opinion. Letter from Mary Ann Saar, Director of Operations in the Office of the Governor, to Anthony Verdecchia, Legislative Auditor (July 17, 1990). Once an agency's decision has been made, the records embodying the decision or policy, and all subsequent explanations and rationales, are available for public inspection. Pre-decisional, deliberative materials remain protected, however, even after the final decision is made. May v. Department of the Air Force, 777 F.2d 1012 (5th Cir. 1985) (so long as the information in question was created prior to the particular decision that was involved, it can retain its privileged status long after the decision-making process has concluded).

The exception is also meant to cover only the deliberative parts of agency memoranda or letters. Generally, it does not apply to records that are purely objective or factual or to scientific data. Stromberg, 382 Md. at 166-67; EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73 (1973). Factual information is not disclosable, however, if it can be used to discover the mental processes of the agency, Dudman Communications Corp v. Department of the Air Force, 815 F.2d 1565 (D.C. Cir. 1987); when it reflects "investigative facts underlying and intertwined with opinions and advice," Office of the Governor, 360 Md. at 559 (quoting Hamilton v. Verdow, 287 Md. 544, 565 (1980)), or when disclosure of the information might deter the agency from seeking valuable information, Quarles v. Department of the Navy, 893 F.2d 390 (D.C. Cir. 1990). In addition, "facts obtained upon promises or understandings of confidentiality, investigative facts underlying and intertwined with opinions and advice, and facts the disclosure of which would impinge on the deliberative process" may also be encompassed by the exemption. Stromberg 382 Md. at 166 (quoting Hamilton v. Verdow).

Both GP § 4-344 and the FOIA exemption have also been construed to temporarily protect some time-sensitive government-generated confidential commercial information. Stromberg, 382 Md. at 167-70; Federal Reserve System v. Merrill, 443 U.S. 340 (1979).

The exemption also covers materials protected under the attorney work-product doctrine. Caffrey v. Dep't. of Liquor Control for Montgomery County, 370 Md. 272, 298 n.15 (2002). Under the Maryland Rules, attorney work product materials are discoverable only upon showing substantial need. Md. Rule 2-402(d). Because attorney work product is not routinely discoverable, for purposes of the PIA, it is not considered "available by law to a party in litigation with the agency." Gallagher v. Office of the Attorney General, 141 Md. App. 664, 673 (2001) (citing Cranford v. Montgomery County, 300 Md. 759, 772-73 (1984)).

The difficulty of applying the GP § 4-344 exception to the myriad of agency-generated documents is obvious. We suggest that a presumption of disclosure should prevail, unless the responsible agency official can demonstrate specific reasons why agency decision-making may be compromised if the questioned records are released. In applying the deliberative process privilege, an agency should determine whether disclosure of the requested information “would actually inhibit candor in the decision-making process if made available to the public.” Army Times Publishing Co. v. Department of the Air Force, 998 F.2d 1067 (D.C. Cir. 1993). Unless specific reasons can be articulated, the agency decision to withhold documents may be overturned by the courts.

In Cranford v. Montgomery County, 300 Md. 759 (1984), the Court of Appeals vacated a decision by the Court of Special Appeals upholding an agency’s decision to withhold documents. The Court of Appeals stated that the agency’s proffered justification was too general and conclusory. It recognized the value of what has come to be called a Vaughn index, after the leading federal case, Vaughn v. Rosen, 484 F.2d 820 (D.C. Cir. 1973). The Court of Appeals also cited the failure of the courts below to analyze the agency memoranda exemption in relationship to discovery of particular documents and suggested that the lower courts had put too much emphasis on the public policy justification for nondisclosure. The Court agreed that reports prepared by outside consultants in anticipation of litigation are not routinely discoverable and may be protected from disclosure under the inter-agency and intra-agency documents exemption. Cranford, 300 Md. at 784. If the expert who made the report is to be called at trial, however, the report is not protected, because it is discoverable under Rule 2-402(f), which requires a party to “produce any written report made by the expert concerning those findings and opinion” 300 Md. at 775.

Maryland Attorney General opinions on this exception are 58 Opinions of the Attorney General 53 (1975) and No. 75-202 (Dec. 1, 1975) (unpublished). Sources on the scope and extent of the FOIA exemption are: 1 Pierce, Administrative Law Treatise (5th ed. § 5.11); 1 O’Reilly, Federal Information Disclosure, Ch. 15 (3d ed. 2000); 168 A.L.R. Fed. 143; and United States Department of Justice, Freedom of Information Act Guide (www.justice.gov/oip/exemption5.htm).

2. Testing Data

GP § 4-345 allows a custodian to deny access to testing data for licensing, employment or academic examinations. For promotional examinations, however, a person who took the exam is given a right to inspect, but not copy, the examination and its results.

3. Research Projects

The specific details of an ongoing research project conducted by an institution of the State or a political subdivision (e.g., medical research project) need not be disclosed by the custodian. GP § 4-346. Only the name, title, expenditures, and the time when the final project summary will be available must be disclosed. See 58 Opinions of the Attorney General 53, 59 (1973) for an application of this exception to a consultant's report. See also Letter from Assistant Attorney General Catherine M. Shultz to Leon Johnson, Chairman, Governor's Commission on Migratory and Seasonal Labor (Aug. 8, 1985) (census information revealing individual migrants' names may be protected under this provision).

4. Inventions Owned by Higher Education Institutions

Under GP § 4-347, information disclosing or relating to an invention owned in whole or in part by a State public institution of higher education need not be disclosed for a limited period. The purpose of this exception is to allow the institution an opportunity to evaluate whether to patent or market the invention and pursue economic development and licensing opportunities. However, this exception does not apply if the information has been published or disseminated by the inventors in the course of their academic activities or if it has been disclosed in a published patent. The exception also does not apply if the invention has been licensed by the institution for at least four years, or if four years have elapsed from the date of the written disclosure of the invention to the institution.

5. Certain Proprietary Information Owned by the Maryland Technology Development Corporation or Senior Higher Education Institutions

GP § 4-348 allows protection of trade secret, confidential commercial information, and confidential financial information owned, in whole or in part, by the Maryland Technology Development Corporation or by a public senior higher education institution (Morgan State University, St. Mary's College, and constituent institutions of the University of Maryland) in connection with economic development efforts and certain arrangements with the private sector.

6. Real Estate Appraisals

GP § 4-349 concerns appraisals of real estate contemplated for acquisition by a State or local entity. An appraisal need not be disclosed until title has passed to that entity. However, the contents of the appraisal are available to the owner of the property at any time, unless some other statute would prohibit access.

7. Location of Plants, Animals, or Property

GP § 4-350 allows a custodian to deny inspection of a record that contains the location of an endangered or threatened species of plant or animal, plants and animals in need of conservation, a cave, or an historic property. However, this provision does not authorize the denial of information requested by the property owner or by any entity authorized to take the property through condemnation.

8. Investigatory Records

GP § 4-351 permits the withholding of certain investigatory records and records that contain intelligence information and security procedures. The determinations required of the custodian vary depending on the particular records at issue.

For certain named agencies, the custodian may deny the right of inspection of records of investigations conducted by the agency, intelligence information, or security procedures. The listed agencies are: any sheriff or police department, any county or city attorney, State's Attorney, or the Attorney General's office. GP § 4-351(a)(1). This exception also applies to intelligence information and security procedures of these agencies, as well as of State and local correctional facilities. GP § 4-351(a)(3). Although not listed in GP § 4-351(a)(1), the State Prosecutor is considered in the same category as a State's Attorney. Office of the State Prosecutor v. Judicial Watch, Inc., 356 Md. 118 (1999). Many records received or created by law enforcement agencies may fall within this category. See, e.g., 92 Opinions of the Attorney General 26 (2007) (mug shot considered an investigatory record).

Not every record in the possession of the law enforcement agency constitutes a record of an investigation. See, e.g., 71 Opinions of the Attorney General 288 (1986) (recordings of 911 calls generally not investigatory records); 63 Opinions of the Attorney General 543 (1978) (arrest logs not investigatory records).

When the records in question are investigatory, and when they come from one of these enumerated agencies, the exception applies without need for an actual showing that the records were compiled for law enforcement or prosecution purposes. The Court of Appeals has held that the investigatory records of one of the seven enumerated agencies are presumed to be for law enforcement purposes. Superintendent v. Henschen, 279 Md. 468 (1977); see also Blythe v. State, 161 Md. App. 492, 525-26 n.6 (2005). Thus, an enumerated agency need not make a particularized showing of a law enforcement purpose to justify the withholding of a record relating to a criminal investigation. See Office of the State Prosecutor, 356 Md. 118. However, once an investigation is closed, disclosure is less likely to be “contrary to the public interest” and courts will require a more particularized factual basis for a “public interest” denial. City of Frederick v. Randall Family, LLC, 154 Md. App. 543, 562-67 (2004); Prince George’s County v. Washington Post Co., 149 Md. App. 289, 333 (2003).

On the other hand, the investigatory files of other agencies are exempt from disclosure only if there is a demonstration that the agency compiled them for a law enforcement, judicial, correctional, or prosecution purpose. Where files are prepared in connection with government litigation, and adjudicative proceedings are currently under way or contemplated, they are compiled for law enforcement purposes. Equitable Trust Co. v. State Human Relations Comm’n, 42 Md. App. 53 (1979), rev’d on other grounds, 287 Md. 80 (1980); ACLU v. Leopold, 223 Md. App. 97, 128 (2015); Letter of Assistant Attorney General Robert A. Zarnoch to Senator Nathaniel J. McFadden and Delegate Stephen J. DeBoy, Sr. (Nov. 8, 2007) (investigations by State Ethics Commission), but cf. 71 Opinions of the Attorney General 305, 313-14 (1986) (agency’s citizen response plan log ordinarily not an investigatory file). An agency, however, has the burden of demonstrating that it meets this criterion. Fioretti v. State Board of Dental Examiners, 351 Md. 66, (1998) (“The agency must, in each particular PIA action, demonstrate that it legitimately was in the process of or initiating a specific relevant investigative proceeding in order to come under the aegis of the exemption.”). Even if the agency makes such a showing, when the agency asserts that disclosure would “prejudice an investigation,” the agency may be required to make a particularized showing of prejudice. Fioretti, 351 Md. at 86-91; but see 351 Md. at 91-95 (Raker, J., concurring) (characterizing latter holding as “dicta”); see also Bowen v. Davison, 135 Md. App. 152 (2000). For further discussion of satisfying the agency’s burden when withholding investigatory records, see Chapter 5.A.3, below.

In carrying out its statutory function, an agency might have records obtained from investigatory files of another agency. In these circumstances, it is appropriate for the agency to withhold investigatory materials if the agency that provided the information would itself deny access under the investigatory records exemption. 89 Opinions of the Attorney General 31, 44 (2004) (addressing records of the Office of the Independent Juvenile Justice Monitor collected in the investigation of Department of Juvenile Services facilities).

Maryland’s current investigatory records exception is similar to the investigatory records exemption in FOIA, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7), and the case law developed under that exemption should be of assistance in interpreting GP § 4-351. Faulk v. State’s Attorney for Harford County, 299 Md. 493 (1984). FOIA cases also discuss criteria for determining whether a record was compiled for law enforcement purposes. See, e.g., John Doe Agency v. John Doe Corp., 493 U.S. 146 (1990) (information or records not initially obtained for law enforcement purposes may qualify for the exemption if they were subsequently compiled for such purposes before the government invokes the exemption); Rosenfeld v. Department of Justice, 57 F.3d 803 (9th Cir. 1995), cert. dismissed, 516 U.S. 1103 (1996) (where compiling agency has clear law enforcement mandate, government has easier burden to establish that record it seeks to withhold was compiled for law enforcement purposes; under these circumstances, the government need only establish rational nexus between the enforcement of federal law and the document for which the law enforcement exemption is claimed); see also 55 A.L.R. Fed. 583.

A custodian of investigatory records must nonetheless disclose them to any person, unless the custodian determines that disclosure would be “contrary to the public interest” or unless other law would prevent disclosure. For example, the Court of Appeals held that it would be contrary to the public interest to disclose the Baltimore City Police Department’s report of its internal investigation of a police officer. Disclosure of an internal report would discourage witnesses or other persons with information from cooperating. Mayor and City Council of Baltimore v. Maryland

Committee Against the Gun Ban, 329 Md. 78 (1993); see also 77 Opinions of the Attorney General 183 (1992) (custodian of an investigatory record containing the name and address of a crime victim would be required under the PIA to consider the assertions of the public interest made by the requester, as well as the privacy interests of the victim); 64 Opinions of the Attorney General 236 (1979) (police department need not disclose police investigative report to the extent that disclosure would be contrary to the public interest). In justifying the denial of a request for an investigatory record under GP § 4-351, the courts have recognized a distinction based on whether an investigation is ongoing or closed. While an investigation is ongoing or the defendant is awaiting trial, the public interest justification is obvious.

Under GP § 4-351(b), however, the “person in interest” is entitled to inspect investigatory records of which he or she is the subject unless production would:

- (1) interfere with a valid and proper law enforcement proceeding;
- (2) deprive another person of a right to a fair trial or an impartial adjudication;
- (3) constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy;
- (4) disclose the identity of a confidential source;
- (5) disclose an investigative technique or procedure;
- (6) prejudice an investigation; or
- (7) endanger the life or physical safety of an individual.

See generally Mayor and City Council of Baltimore v. Maryland Committee Against the Gun Ban, 329 Md. 78 (1993); Briscoe v. Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, 100 Md. App. 124 (1994); 82 Opinions of the Attorney General 111 (1997); 81 Opinions of the Attorney General 154 (1996). Because a person in interest enjoys a favored status, a custodian must point out precisely which of the seven grounds enumerated in GP § 4-351(b) justifies the withholding of an investigatory record and explain precisely why it would do so. Blythe v. State, 161 Md. App. 492, 531 (2005).

The number and wide scope of these factors will often lead to a denial of disclosure by the law enforcement agency, especially where records have been recently obtained and are in active use in investigations. The seven factors listed above may also be considered as part of the “public interest” determination in deciding whether to deny access to a person who is not a person in interest. See National Archives and Records Administration v. Favish, 541 U.S. 157 (2004) (request for death-scene photographs of White House Counsel properly denied under FOIA investigatory records exception in light of privacy interest of the decedent’s family). Indeed, under limited circumstances, one of these factors might even justify an agency’s refusal to confirm or deny that a record exists – something often referred to as a “Glomar response.” See Wilner v. Nat’l Sec. Agency, 592 F.3d 60, 68 (2d Cir. 2009) (a “Glomar response” is a response that neither confirms nor denies the existence of documents responsive to the request, and is permissible where to answer the FOIA inquiry by confirming or denying the existence of responsive documents would “cause harm cognizable under a[] FOIA exception”); see also Beck v. Department of Justice, 997 F.2d 1489 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (personal privacy of drug agent would be needlessly invaded if agency confirmed that record of misconduct investigation existed). Other reasons not listed could also justify nondisclosure to a person who is not a person in interest. 64 Opinions of the Attorney General 236 (1979).

The focus of the provision that protects the identity of a confidential source is not on the motivation of the requestor or the potential harm to the informant. “Rather, the purpose of the exception is to assist law enforcement officials in gathering information by ensuring reluctant sources that their identities would not be disclosed.” Bowen v. Davison, 135 Md. App. 152, 164 (2000). The Supreme Court has held that a law enforcement agency is not entitled to a presumption that all sources supplying information to that agency in the course of a criminal investigation are “confidential sources” within the FOIA exception for investigatory records. Rather, only some narrowly defined circumstances provide a basis for inferring confidentiality, as when paid informants expect their information to remain confidential. Department of Justice v. Landano, 508 U.S. 165 (1993). Thus, there must be an express or implied assurance of confidentiality to the informant. Bowen v. Davison, 135 Md. App. at 164.

Although a “person in interest” is entitled to inspect certain investigatory records that may be denied to third parties, that person’s rights under GP § 4-351(b) do not override other exemptions under the PIA that might justify withholding the records. Office of the Attorney General v. Gallagher, 359 Md. 341 (2000).

9. Records Relating to Public Security

In the aftermath of September 11, 2001, the PIA was amended to prevent use of certain public records to advance terrorist activities. To the extent inspection would jeopardize security of any building, structure, or facility, endanger the life or physical safety of an individual, or facilitate the planning of a terrorist attack, GP § 4-352 allows a custodian to deny inspection of the following public records:

(1) response procedures or plans prepared to prevent or respond to emergency situations, if disclosure would reveal vulnerability assessments, specific tactics, or specific emergency or security procedures;

(2) records prepared to prevent or respond to emergency situations that include certain information regarding medical or storage facilities or laboratories;

(3) drawings, operational manuals, and other records of airports, ports, mass transit facilities, certain transportation infrastructure, emergency response facilities, buildings where hazardous materials are stored, arenas and stadia, water and wastewater treatment systems, and any other building, facility, or structure if disclosure would reveal specified information relating to security; and

(4) records of any other building, facility, or structure if disclosure would reveal life, safety, and support systems, surveillance techniques, alarms or security systems or technologies, operational and evacuation plans or protocols, or personnel deployment.

The protection under this section does not extend to records relating to the inspection by the State or local governments, or citations issued by the State or local governments, of private-sector buildings, structures, or facilities, or records relating to such facilities that have experienced a catastrophic event.

There have not been any reported court decisions applying this exception. See Police Patrol Security Systems, Inc. v. Prince George's County, 378 Md. 702 (2003) (holding that what is now GP § 4-352 would apply to a PIA request pending at the time of its enactment, but declining to decide whether the exception would bar disclosure of the records at issue).

In December 2007, the Office of the Attorney General reviewed the experience under the exception since 2002 and found that it had rarely been invoked by State or local agencies. See Report of the Office of the Attorney General on the Public Security Exception of the Public Information Act (Dec. 2008), available at http://www.oag.state.md.us/Opengov/PIA_public_security_exemption_report.pdf. The Attorney General recommended that the exception be maintained in the statute without amendment. Id.

In preparing the report, the Attorney General's Office noted that some agencies decided not to invoke the public security exception and allowed access to records covered by the exception when the requester agreed to certain conditions. First, one agency reported that it had considered asserting the exception to deny access to such records, but had instead allowed inspection of those records when the requester agreed to forgo requesting a copy. A second agency indicated that, in some circumstances in which it would otherwise assert the exception, it did not do so when the requester agreed to undergo a background check for certain sensitive records.

It might be argued that these approaches are at odds with the PIA. The PIA generally does not allow agencies to condition access to records on disclosure of the identity, affiliation, or purpose of the requester. See GP § 4-204. Also, the general rule under the PIA is that the right to inspect a public record also includes the right to a copy of that record. See GP § 4-201(a)(2) ("Inspection or copying of a public record may be denied only to the extent provided under [the PIA]"); GP § 4-205(b) ("an applicant who is authorized to inspect a public record may have . . . a copy, printout, or photograph of the public record").

However, the practical compromises devised by these agencies might allow greater access to records than otherwise available – i.e., the custodian might otherwise deny access to the records altogether under GP § 4-352 without some assurances as to the identity and background of the individual requesting the record or with the possibility of copies of the entire record circulating outside the agency.

The statutory language accommodates these approaches. GP § 4-352 authorizes a custodian to deny inspection of specified types of records related to public security “only to the extent” that inspection threatens public security in certain specified ways – jeopardizes building or facility security, facilitates the planning of terrorist attack, or endangers life. Among the exceptions in the PIA, this exception is unusual in that it requires the custodian to assess, in light of the particular circumstances, the “extent” to which an adverse outcome will result from inspection. (The other exceptions in the PIA that employ the phrase “only to the extent” are GP § 4-332 (records relating to notary publics) and GP § 4-351 (investigatory records). In both of those instances a custodian may deny a “person in interest” access to the specified records “only to the extent” that certain enumerated harms could occur – e.g. disclosure of a confidential source. The custodian’s judgment inevitably depends on both the nature of the record and on other information available to the custodian. Although a custodian cannot require a requester to provide any information or assurances beyond the requirements of the PIA, the custodian may reasonably take into account any information that the requester voluntarily provides that could affect that judgment.

For example, there may be records that fall within GP § 4-352 and that the custodian reasonably believes should not be generally available for public inspection in full because they would facilitate a terrorist attack. Under the PIA, a requester is not required to undergo a background check, and a custodian of records may not insist on one. However, a requester might voluntarily undergo a background check to provide the custodian with information from which the custodian may reasonably conclude that the inspection of those records is not likely to be used for that purpose. In this respect, the public security exception is unlike other exceptions in the PIA, which generally do not require the custodian to assess “the extent” to which inspection will result in an adverse outcome and thus generally do not allow for different decisions on access depending on information independent of the record itself that is available to the custodian. Massachusetts has adopted a similar approach in construing a public security exception recently added to its public records law. See Massachusetts Supervisor of Public Records, Bulletin No. 04-03 (April 1, 2003) (although a custodian ordinarily may not inquire as to the identity and motive of a requester, a custodian who would otherwise deny access under the public security exception may solicit information from the requester and, if the requester voluntarily provides that information, grant access).

10. Competitive Position of the Port

In order to protect the competitive position of the Port of Baltimore, GP § 4-353 allows a custodian to deny any part of a public record reflecting rates or proposed rates for stevedoring or terminal services or use of facilities that are generated by, received by, or negotiated by the Maryland Port Administration or by a private operating company established by the Port Administration. Proposals aimed at increasing waterborne commerce through Maryland ports as well as research and analysis relating to maritime businesses or vessels compiled to evaluate competitiveness also may be withheld.

11. University College – Competitive Services

GP § 4-354 authorizes the withholding of certain public records relating to University of Maryland University College's competitive position with respect to educational services. It allows withholding part of a public record addressing fees, tuition, charges, and supporting information held by University College (other than fees published in catalogues and ordinarily charged students); proposals for the provision of educational services other than those generated, received, or negotiated with its students; and research, analysis, or plans relating to University College's operations or proposed operations. Not protected under this provision are procurement records, records required by law or by the Board of Regents, and certain records related to the collective bargaining process.

12. Public Institutions of Higher Education – Personal Information

GP § 4-355 authorizes a custodian at public university to withhold a portion of any records that contain "personal information" concerning a student, former student, or applicant if the records are requested for "commercial purposes." In this context, personal information means an address, telephone number, e-mail address and "directory information." The latter phrase is defined in federal law to include the student's name, address, telephone listing, date and place of birth, major field of study, and other information. See 20 U.S.C. § 1232g(a)(5). In a departure from the PIA's general willingness to accommodate informal requests, see GP § 4-202(b), this by first class mail. GP § 4-355(b)(1).

E. Special Court Orders — Preventing Disclosure Where No Exception Applies

A record required to be disclosed under the PIA may be withheld temporarily if the official custodian determines that disclosure would “cause substantial injury to the public interest.” GP § 4-358. Within 10 days after this denial, the official custodian must file an action in the appropriate circuit court seeking an order to permit the continued denial of access. The person seeking disclosure is entitled to notice of the action and has the right to appear and be heard before the circuit court. GP § 4-358(b). An official custodian is liable for actual damages for failure to petition the court for an order to continue a denial of access under this provision. GP § 4-362(d).

After a hearing, the court must make an independent finding that “inspection of the public record would cause substantial injury to the public interest.” To make that determination, the circuit court will likely balance the interest supporting continued withholding of the record against the competing public interest in disclosure. See 97 Opinions of the Attorney General 97 (2012) (describing balancing test that courts would likely apply when evaluating whether to allow the withholding of the private email addresses of constituents who correspond with county commissioners).

For example, the Circuit Court for Baltimore City concluded that potential competitive injury to the Port of Baltimore and BWI Airport justified withholding an agreement between the State and the government of Kuwait regarding the use of State facilities in the post-war reconstruction of Kuwait. Evans v. Lemmon, No. 91162022 (Cir. Ct. Balto. City July 31, 1991). The same circuit court, citing public safety concerns, also upheld the continued withholding, by the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene, of the names of the administrators, owners, and medical directors of private surgical abortion facilities when releasing copies of licensure applications from such facilities. Department of Health and Mental Hygiene v. Glenn, No. 24-C-13-004661, Order (Cir. Ct. Balto. City May 8, 2014). By contrast, the Court of Special Appeals concluded that Baltimore City had no basis under what is now GP § 4-358 to withhold documents concerning the construction of the Patapsco Waste Water Treatment Plant. The Court held that the tactical disadvantage that the City might suffer in arbitration proceedings with the construction company was insufficient to establish the substantial injury to the public interest needed to protect records under this section. City of Baltimore v. Burke, 67 Md. App. 147 (1986). More recently, the Circuit Court of Carroll County concluded that the disclosure of constituent email lists maintained by the county commissioners would not “cause substantial injury to the public interest.” The circuit court acknowledged the potential ill effects of releasing the email addresses, but concluded that the media’s interest in knowing who government officials are communicating with on a routine basis outweighed them. Howard v. Alexanderson, Nos. C-13-063914, C-13-063484 (Cir. Ct. Carroll Cty. Jan. 16, 2014).

Agencies should remember that, by seeking the GP § 4-358 remedy, they are foreclosed from an administrative determination that the records sought are subject to a statutory exception (although the agency might not be barred from simultaneously seeking a declaratory judgment that an exception applies). In Burke, the Baltimore City Department of Public Works lost its right to continue to assert the inter/intra-agency exemption when it sought relief from disclosure under the section. Burke, 67 Md. App. at 152. Agencies should also keep in mind that proceeding under GP § 4-358 might not insulate them from claims for attorneys’ fees in the event that the requester files a counterclaim under GP § 4-362 challenging the non-disclosure. Therefore, this remedy should be viewed as an extraordinary one, requiring careful consultation with counsel before a decision is made to bring a § 4-358 action.

F. Severability of Exempt From Non-exempt

The fact that some portions of a particular record may be exempt from disclosure does not mean that the entire record may be withheld. Blythe v. State, 161 Md. App. 492, 519, cert. granted, 388 Md. 97 (2005). If a record contains exempt and non-exempt material, the custodian must permit inspection of the non-exempt portion of a record, typically by redacting the exempt material. GP § 4-203(c)(1)(ii). The obligation to permit inspection is not necessarily limited to information that is exempt from disclosure under Part III; it also may apply to records that are exempt under Part II. To the extent the obligation may apply to a record under a Part II exemption, severance by way of redaction would be required only if the resulting disclosure of material “does not violate the substance of the exemption.” Maryland State Police v. NAACP, 430 Md. 179, 195 (2013) (redaction of identifying information from personnel records renders the exemption for such records inapplicable because the remaining record does not constitute a “record of an individual” under what is now GP § 4-311).

FOIA cases establish that an agency may deny inspection if exempt portions of the document are inextricably intertwined with nonexempt portions such that excision of the exempt information would impose significant costs on the agency and the final product would contain very little information. See Nadler v. Department of Justice, 955 F.2d 1479 (11th Cir. 1992) (factual material may be withheld when it is impossible to segregate it in a meaningful way from deliberative information); see also Newfeld v. IRS, 646 F.2d 661 (D.C. Cir. 1981). To the extent that an agency decides that non-exempt information is not segregable, it will have the burden of showing this in a non-conclusory affidavit upon judicial review. See Wilkinson v. FBI, 633 F. Supp. 336 (C.D. Cal. 1986).

The persuasive value of these federal cases is unclear in light of 2015 amendments that deleted from the PIA the provision that required agencies to redact exempt material only if it was “reasonably severable” from the rest of the record. See GP § 4-203(c)(1)(ii).

G. Relationship of Exceptions to Discovery

Demands on custodians for documents for civil or criminal trials raise questions about the relationship of judicial discovery rules to the exceptions set forth in Subtitle 3, Parts II, III, and IV. See Tomlinson, The Use of the Freedom of Information Act for Discovery Purposes, 43 Md. L. Rev. 119 (1984). For instance, must an agency resist discovery where the information sought is protected from disclosure by a mandatory or discretionary exception? The limited guidance in the case law is somewhat inconsistent.

In Boyd v. Gullett, 64 F.R.D. 169 (D. Md. 1974), the court held that the exceptions in the PIA do not create privileges for purposes of the federal discovery rules. In reaching this decision, the court relied on analogous cases under FOIA:

The intention of Congress and presumably the Maryland Legislature was to increase public access to government information. Both acts provide that “any person” has the right to non-exempt materials, and the exemptions are merely reasonable limitations on this broad right of “any person” to request information. It would not be reasonable to view such acts as creating new privileges where privileges never existed. Indeed, such an interpretation would result in a restriction of public access to government information. Such a paradoxical result could not have been intended by the Maryland Legislature by its passage of [the PIA], and the Court is satisfied that the exemptions in the statute do not create privileges for the purposes of discovery.

64 F.R.D. at 177-78; see also Mezu v. Morgan State Univ., 269 F.R.D. 565, 576 (D. Md. 2010) (The PIA is not a privilege that bars discovery of otherwise-discoverable documents).

Although the PIA does not create discovery privileges, the fact that a record is exempt from disclosure under the Act is relevant to the record's discoverability. In Fields v. State, 432 Md. 650 (2013), a defendant in a criminal case subpoenaed personnel records of a police officer. The police department moved to quash the subpoena on the ground that the records were made confidential by the PIA. The Court of Appeals treated the personnel records as "confidential material" and outlined a procedure for a trial court to determine the discoverability of such material. Under that procedure – which the Court referred to as the "Zaal test," after Zaal v. State, 326 Md. 54 (1992) – the Court balanced competing interests: those of the party holding the protection of confidentiality and those of the defendant who has the right to confront the witness against him or her. 432 Md. at 667. The ultimate determination of whether to allow discovery of information that is exempt under the PIA is whether disclosing the material "would reveal or lead to admissible evidence." Fields, 432 Md. at 668.

Although a custodian, with advice of counsel, should make records available pursuant to appropriate civil discovery requests, care should be taken to protect records affecting individual privacy interests from broader disclosure than necessary by seeking, or inviting those who are affected to seek, protective orders limiting further disclosure of the record to the parties in the litigation. Often a protective order can be structured in such a manner that relevant information is provided but other information is protected from discovery thereby maximizing the protection of the PIA. See Fields, 432 Md. at 672 (describing different options for protective orders). Note that the General Assembly has explicitly made certain records not discoverable in civil or criminal trials. See, e.g., § 14-410 of the Health Occupations Article.

Just as the PIA does not narrow the scope of discovery, neither does the PIA expand it. In Faulk v. State's Attorney for Harford County, 299 Md. 493 (1984), the Court of Appeals held that the PIA does not expand the right of discovery available to a criminal defendant under what is now Maryland Rule 4-263; see also Office of Attorney General v. Gallagher, 359 Md. 341, 347-48 (2000). The pendency of criminal proceedings triggers the GP § 4-351 exemption, which shields investigatory records from disclosure to an accused. The Faulk Court adopted the reasoning of NLRB v. Robbins Tire & Rubber Co., 437 U.S. 214 (1978), in which the Supreme Court stated that FOIA was not intended to function as a private discovery tool. See 299 Md. at 508-10.

When a prosecutor provides a defendant with discovery in compliance with the court rules on discovery, the prosecutor is not responding to a PIA request. Accordingly, there is no basis under the PIA for charging a fee for mandatory discovery. 93 Opinions of the Attorney General 138 (2008). To the extent that a prosecutor provides services or materials not required by the discovery rules in response to a defense request, there may be a justification under the PIA to charge fees. Id.

The PIA is sometimes used by those involved in administrative proceedings where formal discovery may or may not be available. Because the PIA establishes a statutory right to public records, a person's right to access such records may not be conditioned upon the person's voluntary participation in a deposition in connection with an administrative proceedings unless some provision of the PIA itself justifies withholding the requested record. See, e.g., Hammen v. Baltimore County Police Dep't., 373 Md. 440 (2003).

H. Reverse PIA Actions

A special feature of the exceptions in Parts II and III is that they impose an obligation on the custodian to deny inspection of the listed records or information: "Unless otherwise provided by law, a custodian shall deny inspection" of the record or part of the record. GP §§ 4-304, 4-328 (emphasis added). If the custodian decides to release information or records that might be covered by Parts II and III, the question arises whether the subject of a record or the person submitting a record may bring suit to prevent such a disclosure. In Chrysler Corp. v. Brown, 441 U.S. 281 (1979), the Supreme Court decided that FOIA does not afford a private right of action to prohibit disclosure of information covered by 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Rather, a reverse FOIA action is generally brought under the federal Administrative Procedures Act, with the claim that the agency's decision to release the document was "arbitrary and capricious."

The exceptions in Parts II and III differ from FOIA in this significant respect: the PIA prohibits the disclosure of the records, whereas FOIA allows disclosure even if an exemption could be asserted. Consequently, a "reverse PIA action" (one to prevent rather than allow disclosure) has been authorized in Maryland despite the Chrysler case. See CSX Transp., Inc. v. Maryland Dep't of the Envir., No. 24-C-14-004378 (Cir. Ct. Balt. City Aug. 14, 2015) (recognizing "reverse PIA action" and upholding agency decision to release records); Norfolk Southern Ry. Co. v. Maryland Dep't of the Envir., No. 24-C-14-004367 (Cir. Ct. Balt. City Aug. 14, 2015) (same). If a custodian proposes to release a document arguably covered under these exceptions, the custodian should usually contact the person potentially affected by release so that the person may advise the custodian of his or her views and potentially seek judicial intervention to protect the record from disclosure. In the event of judicial intervention, the custodian or the agency should produce an administrative record that reveals why it decided to release the document, if that document may be covered under the exceptions in Parts II and III. Cf. Reliance Elec. v. Consumer Product Comm'n, 924 F.2d 274 (D.C. Cir. 1991).

It is also conceivable that a person who has provided information or records to an agency could pursue a "reverse PIA" action on a theory that disclosure of the information or records would violate a constitutional right. Doe v. Reed, 561 U.S. 186 (2010) (holding that First Amendment does not bar disclosure under public records act of identities of election petition signers, but allowing plaintiffs to pursue argument that disclosure in a particular case may be unconstitutional).

Chapter 4: Request Procedures

A. Written Request

The PIA envisions a written request. GP § 4-202. However, agencies must identify categories of records that are available for immediate release under GP § 4-201(c) and must make those records available without a written request. GP § 4-202(b)(1). Furthermore, the agency may waive the requirement for a written application. GP § 4-202(b)(2). An agency need not and should not demand written requests for inspection of agency documents when there is no question that the public has a right to inspect them. For example, an agency's annual report and the agency's quarterly statistics are clearly open to the public for inspection. In other instances, a written request or the completion of an agency request form may help expedite fulfillment of the request when less commonly requested records are sought. A request expressing a desire to inspect or copy agency records may be sufficient to trigger the PIA's requirements, even if it does not expressly mention the words "Public Information Act" or cite the applicable sections of the State Government Article.

In general, there is no requirement that the applicant give the reason for a request or identify himself or herself, although he or she is certainly free to do so. The reasons for which the information is sought are generally not relevant. See Moberly v. Herboldsheimer, 276 Md. at 227; 61 Opinions of the Attorney General 702, 709 (1976). These reasons might be pertinent, however, if the applicant seeks a waiver of fees. See p. 7.3 below. Knowledge of the purpose of the request may sometimes assist a custodian who is required under Part IV to make a "public interest" determination prior to releasing a record. See GP § 4-343. In addition, a public institution of higher education has a right to know whether a requester seeking students' personal information is seeking records for a commercial purpose. GP § 4-355(b). The identity of an applicant is relevant if he or she is seeking access in one of the particular situations where the PIA gives a "person in interest" special rights of access.

The request must sufficiently identify the records that the applicant seeks. See Letter from Assistant Attorney General Kimberly Smith Ward to Deborah Byrd, Dorchester County Commissioner's Office (May 7, 1996) (PIA request must sufficiently identify records so as to notify agency of the records requested); see also Sears v. Gottschalk, 502 F.2d 122 (4th Cir. 1974) (FOIA calls for reasonable description, enabling government employee to locate requested records). In some instances, applicants may have only limited knowledge of the types of records the agency has and may not be able to describe precisely the records they seek. An agency may appropriately assist an applicant to clarify a request when feasible.

Generally, an agency may not require the Legislative Auditor to submit a written request pursuant to the PIA. However, if an employee of the Legislative Auditor – without stating an organizational affiliation and without invoking the powers granted under the audit statute (GP §§ 2-1217 to 2-1227) – requests information from an agency that is not the subject of the audit, the agency that receives the request should treat it as a request subject to all of the procedures of the PIA, including the requirement of a written application. 76 Opinions of the Attorney General 287 (1991).

B. Submitting the Request

Requests may be submitted to the agency's "official custodian" or to the person the agency designates as its PIA representative under GP § 4-503(a). That provision requires that each governmental unit identify a representative to whom applicants should send PIA requests and post the representative's contact information on the unit's website or, if it does not have one, "at a place easily accessible by the public." The contact information must include the representative's name, business address, phone number, and email address, and the unit's internet address. Each unit must update the contact information annually and submit it to the Office of the Attorney General, which will publish the information on its website and in this Manual. See Appendix J.

C. Time for Response

Under GP § 4-203(b)(1), if a custodian determines that a record is responsive to a request and open to inspection, the custodian must produce the record "immediately" after receipt of the written request. An additional reasonable period "not to exceed 30 days" is available only where the additional period of time is required to retrieve the records and assess their status under the PIA. A custodian should not, however, wait the full 30 days to allow or deny access to a record if that amount of time is not needed to respond.

If access is to be granted, the record should be produced for inspection and copying promptly after the written request is evaluated. If it will take more than 10 working days to produce the requested records, the custodian must notify the requester, in writing or by email, of that fact. GP § 4-203(b)(2). The notification must be sent within the same 10-day time period and must indicate the amount of time needed to respond, the reason for the delay, and an estimate of the range of fees that may be charged. A sample 10-day letter is contained in Appendix B.

When access is denied, the custodian must, within 10 working days, provide the applicant with a written statement of the reasons for the denial in accordance with GP § 4-203(c)(1). This 10-day period is in addition to the maximum 30-day (or, with an agreed extension, 60-day) period for granting or denying a request. Stromberg Metal Works, Inc. v. University of Maryland, 382 Md. 151, 158-59 (2004). However, in practice, the denial and explanation generally are provided as part of a single response.

If the request is unclear or unreasonably broad, the custodian should promptly ask the applicant to clarify or narrow the request. If the applicant responds promptly, the custodian should fulfill the revised request as soon as possible within 30 days of the initial request. But if good faith discussions take an extended period of time, the custodian should clarify when the 30-day period has begun. Under no circumstances should the custodian wait the full 30 days and deny the initial request on the grounds that it is unclear or unreasonably broad.

The time periods imposed by GP § 4-203 may be extended, with the consent of the applicant, for an additional period not to exceed 30 days. GP § 4-203(d)(1). Those same time periods are extended by operation of law if the applicant turns to the Public Access Ombudsman for resolution of a dispute. GP § 4-203(d)(2).

A troubling question is presented where the custodian, acting in good faith, is unable to comply with the time limits set by the PIA. For example, a custodian may have trouble retrieving old records and then, after retrieval, may find that portions of the records must be redacted to protect confidential material from disclosure. Even with due diligence, the custodian may be unable to comply with the request within the time limits set by the PIA. Unless the applicant agrees to an extension under GP § 4-203(d), the custodian's failure to respond within 30 days is deemed a denial of the request. GP § 4-203(b)(3).

To avoid a constructive denial, the custodian should make the best good faith response possible by: (1) providing an interim response within the 30-day period; (2) allowing inspection of any portion of the records that are currently available; and (3) informing the applicant, within the imposed time limit, of the reasons for the delay and an estimated date when the agency's review will be complete. The custodian may also bring the matter before the Public Access Ombudsman, who is authorized to hear disputes involving "the amount of time a custodian needs, given available staff and resources, to produce public records." GP § 4-1B-04(a)(5). Either way, if the agency works with the applicant in good faith and complies with the 10-day notification requirement of GP § 4-203(b)(2), a reviewing court will likely consider the agency's failure to produce records within the requisite time period to be a bona fide dispute and not a knowing and willful violation of the Act. See GP §§ 4-203(b)(3); 4-362(d)(1).

This course should be followed only when it is impracticable for the custodian to comply with the PIA's time limits. Every effort should be made to follow the PIA's time limits. However, if an agency can show that it is exercising due diligence in responding to a request, courts have allowed the agency additional time. See ACLU v. Leopold, 223 Md. App. 97, 124 (2015) (no error where agency provided a partial response within 30 days and began a dialogue as part of reasonable response process); see also Open America v. Watergate Special Prosecution Force, 547 F.2d 605 (D.C. Cir. 1976) (court allowed FBI to handle large volume of requests for information by fulfilling requests on a first-in, first-out basis even though statutory time limits were exceeded); Exner v. FBI, 542 F.2d 1121 (9th Cir. 1976); Hayden v. Department of Justice, 413 F. Supp. 1285 (D.D.C. 1976). Other courts have resisted agency efforts to maintain a routine backlog of FOIA requests. See Ray v. Department of Justice, 770 F. Supp. 1544 (S.D. Fla. 1990) (routine administrative backlog of requests for records did not constitute "exceptional circumstances" allowing agency to respond outside FOIA's 10-day requirement). Accord, Mayock v. INS, 714 F. Supp. 1588 (N.D. Cal. 1989), rev'd, 938 F. 2d 1006 (9th Cir. 1990).

While the time limits in the PIA are important and an agency or custodian may be sanctioned in a variety of ways under the statute for a failure to comply, see Chapter 8 below, an agency's failure to respond within the statutory deadlines does not waive applicable exemptions under the Act. "[T]he custodian [is not] required to disgorge records that the Legislature has declared should not be disclosed simply because the custodian did not communicate his/her decision in a timely manner." Stromberg Metal Works Inc. v. University of Maryland, 382 Md. 151, 161 (2004).

D. Inspection

A custodian is to permit a requester to inspect records “at any reasonable time.” GP § 4-201(a)(1). Agency regulations may elaborate on procedures for inspecting records. GP § 4-201(b). If records are held by various custodians in different locations, an agency is not necessarily obligated to transport them to a centralized location for inspection. Ireland v. Shearin, 417 Md. 401, 411-12 (2010). In situations where the requester is unable to personally inspect records, the agency may instead mail copies of the requested records at the requester’s expense. Id.

E. Records Not in Custodian’s Custody or Control

If a written request for access to a record is made to a person who is not the custodian, that person must, within 10 working days of the receipt of the request, notify the applicant of this fact and, if known, the actual custodian of the record and the location or possible location of the record. GP § 4-202(c).

F. Written Denial

When a request is denied, the custodian must provide, within 10 working days, a written statement that gives (1) the reasons for the denial, including, if an exemption in Part IV is invoked, a brief explanation why the denial is necessary; (2) the legal authority for the denial; (3) a brief description of the withheld record that will enable the applicant to assess the applicability of the legal authority for the denial; and (4) notice of the remedies for review of the denial. GP § 4-203(c); City of Frederick v. Randall Family, LLC, 154 Md. App. 543 (2004) (denial letter was legally deficient because it failed to explain reason for denying access under what is now GP § 4-351, in connection with closed investigation). An itemized index of withheld documents – sometimes referred to as a Vaughn index – is not required at the administrative denial stage, as long as the letter complies with GP § 4-203(c). Generally, a denial letter should be reviewed by the agency’s legal counsel before it is sent out to ensure that the denial is legally correct and to ensure that the four elements in GP § 4-203(c) are adequately and correctly stated in the letter. A sample denial letter is contained in Appendix C.

Before sending a denial letter and after consulting with counsel, a custodian should consider contacting the applicant or the applicant’s attorney to explain what the agency will not produce. The applicant may choose to alter the part of the request that is giving the agency difficulty and thus avoid the need for a formal denial.

Chapter 5:

Administrative and Judicial Review

A. Judicial Enforcement

The PIA provides for judicial enforcement of the rights provided under the Act. GP § 4-362. It authorizes a suit in the circuit court to “enjoin” an entity, official, or employee from withholding records and order the production of records improperly withheld. Under a 2014 amendment to this provision, the right to judicial review now expressly includes the right to challenge an agency’s refusal to provide copies of responsive records. See 2014 Md. Laws, ch. 584.

1. Limitations

The Court of Special Appeals has held that actions for judicial review under GP § 4-362 of the PIA are controlled by § 5-110 of the Courts and Judicial Proceedings Article, which has a two-year limitations period, rather than by what is now Rule 7-203, which would require the action to be brought within 30 days. The Court did not decide whether proceedings under what is now GP § 4-362 are subject to any other rules governing administrative appeals. Kline v. Fuller, 56 Md. App. 294 (1983). Given that a requester may make a new PIA request after a period of limitations has expired concerning the denial of a prior request, the Court of Special Appeals has characterized the two-year limitations period as of “minuscule significance.” Blythe v. State, 161 Md. App. 492, 512 (2005).

2. Procedural Issues

- Venue. Venue is proper where the complainant resides or has a principal place of business or where the records are located. GP § 4-362(a); see Attorney Grievance Commission v. A.S. Abell, 294 Md. 680 (1982).
- Answer. The defendant must answer or otherwise plead within 30 days after service, unless the time period is expanded for good cause shown. GP § 4-362(b)(1).

- Expedited hearing. GP § 4-362(c) provides for expedited court proceedings in PIA cases. The agency and counsel should cooperate if the plaintiff seeks a quick judicial determination.
- Intervention. In some cases, it may be appropriate for a third party to intervene in an action for disclosure. For example, if the issue is the release of investigatory, financial, or similar records, the person who is the subject of the records may wish to intervene under Maryland Rule 2-214. In an appropriate case, particularly one involving confidential business records, the agency should consider inviting affected persons to intervene. In that event, an affected person's failure to seek intervention may itself be an indication that the records are not truly confidential.

3. Agency Burden

The burden is on the entity or official withholding a record to sustain its action. GP § 4-362(b)(2). If the custodian invokes the agency memoranda exception, however, and the trial court determines that one of the privileges embraced within that exemption applies, the custodian will have met the burden of showing that disclosure would be contrary to the public interest. Cranford v. Montgomery County, 300 Md. 759, 776 (1984). The PIA specifically provides that the defendant custodian may submit a memorandum to the court justifying the denial. GP § 4-362(b)(2)(ii). Cranford discusses the level of detail necessary to support a denial of access.

To satisfy the statutory burden, an entity or official withholding a record must put forth evidence sufficient to justify the decision. In some circumstances, a court may require the agency to file a Vaughn index (named after Vaughn v. Rosen, 484 F.2d 820 (D.C. Cir. 1973)) detailing each record withheld or redacted by author, date, and recipient, stating the particular exemption claimed, and providing enough information about the subject matter to permit the requester and court to test the justification of the withholding. See Blythe v. State, 161 Md. App. 492, 521 (2005).

A regulatory agency that denies a person in interest access to an investigatory file under GP § 4-351 must establish first, that the file was compiled for a law enforcement purpose and, second, that disclosure would have one of the effects under GP § 4-351(b). Fioretti v. State Board of Dental Examiners, 351 Md. 66 (1998) (holding in plaintiff's favor because the agency failed to support its motion to dismiss with affidavits, a summary of the file, or other relevant evidence).

In contrast, a law enforcement agency enumerated under GP § 4-351(a)(1) is presumed to have compiled an investigatory file for law enforcement purposes. Blythe v. State, 161 Md. App. 492, 525-26 n.6 (2005). Because a generic determination of interference with a pending investigation can be made, a “Vaughn index” listing each document, its author, date, and general subject matter, and the basis for withholding the document, is not required. See Office of the State Prosecutor v. Judicial Watch, Inc., 356 Md. 118 (1999). However, the custodian nevertheless bears the burden of “demonstrating, with particularity and not in purely conclusory terms, precisely why the disclosure [of an investigatory record] ‘would be contrary to the public interest’” and exploring the feasibility of severing a record “into disclosable and non-disclosable parts.” Blythe v. State, 161 Md. App. 492, 527 (2005).

The court may examine the questioned records in camera to determine whether an exception applies. GP § 4-362(c)(2); see Equitable Trust Co. v. State Comm’n on Human Relations, 42 Md. App. 53 (1979), rev’d on other grounds, 287 Md. 80 (1980). GP § 4-362(c)(2) is discretionary, not mandatory. Whether an in camera inspection will be made ultimately depends on whether the trial judge believes that it is needed for a responsible determination on claims of exemption. Cranford v. Montgomery County, 300 Md. 759, 779 (1984); see also Zaal v. State, 326 Md. 54 (1992) (discussing alternative approaches to protecting sensitive records).

B. Administrative Review

In addition to judicial review, a PIA applicant has two options for less formal, administrative review of agency decisions: the Public Access Ombudsman and the State Public Information Act Compliance Board. Both were added to the statute during the 2015 session to give applicants a means of obtaining review of agency decisions without the delay and expense associated with formal administrative or judicial litigation.

1. Public Access Ombudsman

The Ombudsman is a State official charged with making reasonable attempts to resolve disputes between custodians and applicants. Although the Ombudsman’s role is not limited to particular types of disputes, the statute lists some disputes that the Ombudsman is specifically charged with hearing:

- the application of an exemption;
- redactions;
- the failure to respond in a timely manner or to provide all responsive records;
- overly broad requests;
- the amount of time a custodian needs, given available staff and resources, to produce public records;
- requests for or denials of fee waivers; and
- repetitive or redundant requests.

GP § 4-1B-04(a). The Ombudsman plays the role of mediator only. The Ombudsman does not have the power to compel the custodian to disclose records or information, or even to provide materials for in camera review. GP § 4-1B-04(b)(1). Nor does the Ombudsman have the power to conclusively resolve a dispute for purposes of judicial review. Instead, the Ombudsman is charged with trying to resolve disputes in a manner that is acceptable to both the conclusion and the applicant. The ultimate decision whether to accept the Ombudsman's resolution lies with the parties.

The Act does not expressly require an applicant or custodian to bring a dispute before the Ombudsman before seeking judicial review under GP § 4-362. Given that the Ombudsman's resolution of a dispute is non-binding, the intent of the Legislature appears to have been to provide a separate, entirely voluntary means of resolving disputes. Although Ombudsman review is voluntary and non-binding, the burden is on the custodian to demonstrate that a denial is "clearly applicable to the requested public record." GP § 4-301(b)(1). And if the denial is based on one of the discretionary exemptions in Part IV, the custodian must demonstrate that "the harm from disclosure . . . is greater than the public interest in access to the information in the public record." GP § 4-301(b)(2).

2. State Public Information Act Compliance Board

The State Public Information Act Compliance Board is charged with resolving complaints that a custodian has charged an unreasonable fee of more than $350. For the Board to have jurisdiction, the fee charged must exceed $350; a smaller fee cannot form the basis of a complaint before the Board. GP §§ 4-1A-04(a)(1), 4-1A-05(a). In this respect, then, the Board's role is more limited than the Ombudsman's.

The Board, however, has greater powers than the Ombudsman. Where the Ombudsman plays the role of informal mediator, the Board is authorized to issue written decisions with binding effect. Specifically, the Board, if it determines that the custodian has charged an unreasonable fee of more than $350, has the power to order the custodian to reduce the fee to a reasonable amount determined by the Board and refund the difference. GP § 4-1A-04(a)(2), (3).

Proceedings before the Board are initiated by the filing of a complaint signed by the applicant or the applicant's designated representative. GP § 4-1A-05. The complaint, among other things, must identify the custodian and describe the fee that the custodian charged, the date it was charged, and the circumstances surrounding the imposition of the fee. GP § 4-1A-05(b). The complaint must be filed within 90 days after the date of the challenged action. Id.

After a complaint is filed, the Board must refer it to the custodian identified in the complaint. The custodian then has 15 days, from receipt of the complaint, in which to file a written response. If requested by the Board, the custodian must include in the response the basis for the fee that was charged. GP § 4-1A-06(b). If the custodian does not file a response within 45 days of the Board's notice, the Board must decide the case on the facts before it. GP § 4-1A-06(c). If the custodian files a response and the information in the complaint and response is sufficient for the Board to resolve the complaint, the Board may do so without further inquiry and issue a written opinion determining whether the fee violated the "reasonable fee" provisions of GP § 4-206. GP § 4-1A-07(a)(2).

If the Board is not able to resolve the complaint on the basis of the complaint and response, it may hold an informal conference to "hear from the complainant, the custodian, or any other person with relevant information about the subject of the complaint." GP § 4-1A-07(b). The Board may allow the parties to present testimony in person, via teleconference, or in writing. If the parties elect to participate in person, the Board must hold the conference at a location “as convenient as practicable” to the parties. Id. Although the conference apparently allows for the Board to hear testimony and admit evidence, it is not a contested case hearing within the meaning of the APA. GP § 4-1A-07(b)(3).

The Board must issue a written opinion within 30 days of receiving the custodian’s response or, if it elects to hold an informal conference, within 30 days after the conference. If the Board is unable to render a decision within that time period, it must state the reasons for its inability and issue an opinion as soon as possible thereafter, but not later than 90 days after the filing of the complaint. GP § 4-1A-07(c)(1). The Board may, however, state that it is unable to resolve the complaint. GP § 4-1A-07(c)(2). The Board’s opinions are posted on the Attorney General’s website.

The applicant need not pursue a complaint before the Board, but may instead elect to proceed straight to judicial review without having to exhaust the administrative remedy. GP § 4-1A-10(a). But if an applicant elects to file a complaint with the Board, the Board’s resolution of that complaint may be appealed—by either party, depending on the outcome—to the circuit court for the county where the complainant resides or has a principal place of business or where the public record is located. GP §§ 4-1A-10(b)(1); 4-362(a)(2), (3). The filing of an appeal automatically stays the effect of the Board’s decision for 30 days from the date on which the defendant serves an answer or otherwise pleads to the complaint, whichever is sooner. GP § 4-1A-10(b)(2). This limited stay appears to have been designed to allow the custodian a period of time in which to seek from the circuit court, under the provisions of Title 7 of the Maryland Rules, a more extended stay pending appeal.

Chapter 6: Copies

A. Right to Copies

GP § 4-205 grants any person who has the right to inspect a public record the right to be furnished copies, printouts, or photographs for a reasonable fee. If the custodian does not have the facilities to reproduce a record, the applicant should be granted access to make a copy. A copy of a court judgment may not be provided, however, until the time for appeal has expired or until an appeal has been adjudicated or dismissed. GP § 4-205(e). This provision should be applied only to non-litigants, since the Maryland Rules of Procedure require copies to be furnished to litigants. See Memorandum from Assistant Attorney General Catherine M. Shultz to Clerks of the Circuit Courts (July 27, 1983). Another exception pertains to written promotional examinations: while certain individuals may review the examination and results after the examination has been graded, they are not entitled to a copy. GP § 4-345(b).

B. Format

With the exception of records stored in electronic format (addressed in Part C below), the PIA has not generally addressed the format in which copies should be provided. (The Legislature has designated the Department of Legislative Services as the “sole determiner” of the form in which records of the General Assembly are released in response to a PIA request, State Gov’t § 2-1249.) Nor have the Maryland courts resolved whether the right to copies includes the right to pick the format in which records are copied. Federal authority decided before 1996, when FOIA was amended to address the question, as well as some out-of-state authority, held that the agency, not the requester, has the right to select the format of disclosure. See E. S. Dismukes v. Department of the Interior, 603 F. Supp. 760 (D.D.C. 1984); Chapin v. Freedom of Info. Comm., 22 Conn. App. 316, 577 A.2d 300 (1990). In the past this Office adopted a similar position. Nonetheless, to further the PIA’s general purposes, agencies should voluntarily accede to the requester’s choice of format unless doing so imposes a significant, unrecoverable cost or other burden on the agency. See 56 Opinions of the Attorney General 461 (1971); Letter from Assistant Attorney General Emory A. Plitt, Jr. to Sheriff Earnest Zaccanelli, Prince George's County Sheriff's Department (June 27, 1983); Letter from Assistant Attorney General Kathryn M. Rowe to F. Carvel Payne, Director, Department of Legislative Reference (Jan. 9, 1995) (PIA does not require that the requested information be given in any particular form). For example, an agency typically should allow a requester to make copies with a hand-held scanner unless the mechanism by which the scanner operates could harm the document.

C. Format of Copies of Electronic Records

Under the Electronic Freedom of Information Act Amendments of 1996, a federal agency must provide a record in the format requested if the record is readily reproducible in that format. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3)(B); see O'Reilly, Federal Information Disclosure § 7:37 (3d ed. 2000). Until recently, the PIA had no similar express requirement.

In 2011, however, the General Assembly amended the PIA to provide a requester with a right to obtain a copy of an electronic record in a “searchable and analyzable electronic format” in specified circumstances. GP § 4-205(c). The law sets forth certain key conditions:

- (1) The public record must exist in a “searchable and analyzable” format;
- (2) the requester must explicitly request the copy in a searchable and analyzable format; and
- (3) the custodian must be able to produce the copy without compromising material that is exempt from disclosure.

GP § 4-205(c)(1). The statute does not define “searchable and analyzable electronic format.” However, the phrase is likely meant to obligate agencies to provide records in formats that can be searched and manipulated when the requester seeks such capabilities and the agency can readily remove any exempt material. A custodian is not required to release a record in a format that would somehow compromise the security or integrity of the original record or of any proprietary software – generally, a rare possibility. GP § 4-205(c)(4)(iv).

When the Legislature created this presumptive right to an electronic copy of an electronic record, it also authorized custodians to remove certain information, known as “metadata,” from the copies that are provided, regardless of whether the metadata is otherwise exempt from disclosure. GP § 4-205(c)(3). “Metadata” – literally, data about data – is information in an electronic record that is generally not visible but is often readily accessible in particular formats. Metadata sometimes contains exempt material – for example, the metadata for a word processing document may include prior drafts, editorial comments, suggestions by reviewers, and other material that may be exempt as part of a pre-decisional deliberative process. See Chapter 3.D.1. above. But other metadata may be relatively innocuous material not covered by any exemption. For example, it may record each time the record was opened or edited. The invisible nature of metadata has made it a matter of concern to custodians.

Section 4-205(a) defines metadata as follows:

(1) “Metadata” means information, generally not visible when an electronic document is printed, describing the history, tracking, or management of the electronic document, including information about data in the electronic document that describes how, when, and by whom the data is collected, created, accessed, or modified and how it is formatted.

(2) “Metadata” does not include:

- (a) a spreadsheet formula;
- (b) a database field;
- (c) an externally or internally linked file; or
- (d) a reference to an external file or hyperlink.

This definition thus broadly defines “metadata” but also limits it. The statute permits a custodian to remove metadata from the copy of an electronic record provided to a requester by means of a software program or by converting the electronic record to a different searchable and analyzable format without the metadata. GP § 4-205(a)(3). The definition of metadata, with its very specific exceptions, and the authorization to remove metadata from copies appear to be a legislative effort to create a presumptive right for a requester to a usable electronic copy and, at the same time, to provide some comfort to a custodian who wishes to avoid the inadvertent production of exempt materials in invisible metadata.

Chapter 7:

Fees

A. Search and Preparation Fees

Under GP § 4-206, an official custodian may charge reasonable fees for the search and preparation of records for inspection and copying. Search and preparation fees must be reasonably related to the actual cost to the governmental unit in processing the request. GP § 4-206(a); see also 71 Opinions of the Attorney General 318, 329 (1986) (“The goal . . . should be . . . neither to make a profit nor to bear a loss on the cost of providing information to the public.”). The custodian may charge a “reasonable fee” to search for, prepare, and reproduce a record in a customized format selected by the applicant, and may charge “the actual costs” of searching for, preparing, and producing a public record in standard format. GP § 4-206(b)(1). Fees may not be charged, however, for the first two hours of search and preparation time. GP § 4-206(c).

Search fees are the costs to an agency for locating requested records. Usually, this involves the cost of an employee’s time spent in locating the requested records. Preparation fees are the costs to an agency to prepare a record for inspection or copying, including the time needed to assess whether any provision of law permits or requires material to be withheld. For example, where a document contains both information that the public is entitled to see and information that the custodian may not by law release, an employee’s time will be needed to prepare and copy the record with the exempt information deleted. Redaction will often be necessary where records contain investigatory or confidential financial information.

The actual cost of a response must be calculated by prorating the salaries of the staff and attorneys involved in the response by the actual time they spent searching for and preparing the record for disclosure. GP § 4-206(b)(2).

On a rare occasion, a requester (or group of requesters) may attempt to artificially break a large request into a series of smaller requests to obtain two free hours searching for each request in order to circumvent the assessment of fees. If the purpose is clear, it seems reasonable for the agency to aggregate those requests as a single request with the appropriate fee. On the other hand, nothing in the Act prohibits a requester from making multiple requests and an agency should not artificially aggregate separate requests to increase the fee to discourage those requests.

Although the PIA does not address the issue of prepayment of fees, agency regulations may do so. The Court of Appeals has indicated that an agency may appropriately require prepayment of fees. Ireland v. Shearin, 417 Md. 401, 412 n.8 (2010) (agency may require inmate to prepay fees for copies when inmate is unable to inspect records personally due to incarceration). Following the model regulations in Appendix F, many agencies require prepayment or a commitment to pay fees prior to copying records to be disclosed. See, e.g., COMAR 08.01.06.11D(2) (Department of Natural Resources); COMAR 09.01.04.14D (Department of Licensing and Regulation). Federal agencies typically have regulations requiring prepayment or an agreement to pay fees as a prerequisite to the processing of a request, at least when fees are expected to exceed a set amount. See, e.g., 16 C.F.R. § 4.8(d)(3) (Federal Trade Commission); 43 C.F.R. § 2.18 (Department of the Interior); see also Pollack v. Department of Justice, 49 F.3d 115 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 843 (1995) (when requester refused to commit to pay fees in accordance with agency's regulations, agency had authority to stop processing FOIA request); Stout v. United States Parole Comm'n, 40 F.3d 136 (6th Cir. 1994) (an agency's regulation requiring payment of fees before release of already processed records was proper and did not violate FOIA); Farrugia v. Executive Office for United States Attorneys, 366 F. Supp. 2d 56 (D.D.C. 2005) (agency may require payment of search fee before sending records to requester).

B. Reasonable Fees for Copies

An official custodian may charge a "reasonable fee" for copies. GP § 4-206(b). "Reasonable fee" is defined as "a fee bearing a reasonable relationship to the recovery of actual costs incurred by a governmental unit." GP § 4-206(a). Fees should not be set simply to deter requests to inspect records or get copies.

Many agencies have standard schedules of fees for copies. For example, the Department of Agriculture charges 15¢ per page for a copy of a record. COMAR 15.01.04.14. Agencies should adopt standard fee schedules so that the public and agency employees know what charges will be made. Note that if another law sets a fee for a copy, printout, or photograph, that law applies. GP § 4-206(d)(1).

C. Waiver of Fees

An applicant may ask the agency for a total or partial waiver of fees. Under GP § 4-206(e), the official custodian may waive any fee or cost assessed under the PIA if the applicant asks for a waiver and if (1) the applicant is indigent, as that term is defined under the Act, or (2) the official custodian determines that a waiver would be in the public interest.

A requester is considered indigent for purposes of the Act if his or her family household income is less than 50% of the median family income for the state, as reported in the Federal Register. GP § 4-206(a)(2). To obtain a waiver on this basis, the applicant must submit an affidavit of indigency. GP § 4-206(e)(2). A form indigency affidavit is contained in Appendix D.

To determine whether a waiver is in the public interest, the official custodian must consider not only the ability of the applicant to pay, but also other relevant factors. A waiver may be appropriate, for example, when a requester seeks information for a public purpose, rather than a narrow personal or commercial interest, because a public purpose justifies the expenditure of public funds to comply with the request. For example, in one case, the Court of Special Appeals found that Baltimore City's denial of a reporter's request to waive fees was arbitrary and capricious because the City only considered the expense to itself and the ability of the newspaper to pay and did not consider other relevant factors. The Court suggested that relevant factors included the public benefit in making available information concerning one of the City's major financial undertakings and the danger that imposing a fee for information upon a newspaper publisher might have a chilling effect on the full exercise of freedom of the press. City of Baltimore v. Burke, 67 Md. App. 147 cert. denied, 306 Md. 118 (1986); see also 81 Opinions of the Attorney General 154 (1996) (waiver of fee depends on a number of relevant factors and cannot be based solely on the poverty of the requester or the cost to the agency).

In deciding whether to waive a fee, an official custodian may find it helpful to look at case law interpreting the comparable FOIA provision, 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A). In one useful case, Project on Military Procurement v. Dept. of Navy, 710 F. Supp. 362

(D.D.C. 1989), the federal court identified as material factors the potential that the requested disclosure would contribute to public understanding and the significance of that contribution. See also Larson v. CIA, 843 F.2d 1481 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (requester of information under FOIA seeking fee waiver must not have commercial interest in disclosure of information sought and must show that disclosure of information would be likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of government operations or activities); National Treasury Employees Union v. Griffin, 811 F.2d 644 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (fee waiver requests under FOIA grounded on public interest theory must show connection between material sought and matter of genuine public concern and must also indicate that fee waiver or production will primarily benefit public); Crooker v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, 882 F. Supp. 1158 (D. Mass. 1995) (agency justified in denying request for fee where disclosure was not likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of government operations); cf. Diamond v. FBI, 548 F. Supp. 1158 (S.D.N.Y. 1982) (overturning agency's decision denying fee waiver when university professor sought materials for academic lectures and articles).

Chapter 8: Remedies

The PIA provides for both civil and criminal penalties for violations of the Act. Given this potential liability and the salutary purposes of the PIA, care should be taken to make certain that an agency's officials and employees comply with the Act.

A. Liability of Agency

In addition to injunctive relief, a court may award actual damages and statutory damages of up to $1,000 against a governmental unit if the court finds that a defendant knowingly and willfully failed to disclose a public record or part of a record that the person was entitled to inspect. GP § 4-362(d)(1). The official custodian is also liable for actual damages for failure to petition a court for an order to continue a temporary denial. GP § 4-362(d)(2). The statutory term "actual damages" does not include emotional damages. ACLU v. Leopold, 223 Md. App. 97, 123 (2015).

Reasonable attorneys' fees and other litigation costs are available if an applicant "substantially prevails." GP § 4-362(f). The awarding of attorneys' fees lies with the discretion of the trial court. Caffrey v. Dep't of Liquor Control for Montgomery County, 370 Md. 272, 299 (2002). While an actual judgment in favor of the applicant is not necessarily required for an applicant to "substantially prevail," the applicant must demonstrate that filing suit could reasonably be regarded as having been necessary to gain access to the records sought, that there is a causal nexus between the suit and the agency's release of the record, and that "key documents" were recovered. Id. (citing Kline v. Fuller, 64 Md. App. 375, 385 (1985)). Among the pertinent considerations to be taken into account are the benefit the public derived from the suit, the nature of the applicant's interest in the released information, and whether the agency's withholding of the information had a reasonable basis in law. Caffrey, 370 Md. at 385 (citing Kirwan v. The Diamondback, 352 Md. 74, 95-96 (1998)); see also Stromberg Metal Works, Inc. v. University of Maryland, 395 Md. 120 (2006).

If the statute creating the agency specifically grants immunity from liability, that specific enactment will prevail over GP § 4-362(d). A.S. Abell Publishing Co. v. Mezzanote, 297 Md. 26 (1983). However, protection from damages does not equate to protection from liability and does not protect against the award of attorney fees under the PIA. Caffrey v. Department of Liquor Control for Montgomery County, 370 Md. 272, 296 (2002).

The standard for attorneys' fees is very close to the standards under FOIA (5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(E)) and the Civil Rights Attorneys Fees Act (42 U.S.C. § 1988), and the same liberal construction of "substantially prevailing" would probably apply under the Maryland Act. For a discussion of cases under 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(E), see 179 A.L.R. Fed. 1; see also Stromberg, 395 Md. at 131 n.4 (2006) (questioning whether a litigant who obtains favorable court decision with respect to one item of information has "substantially prevailed").

Fees and costs are available under the PIA only to a prevailing "applicant." Compare this provision with the Open Meetings Act, § 3-401(d)(5)(i) of the General Provisions Article, which makes any "party" eligible for fees and costs.

B. Liability of Persons Who Violate the Act

1. Criminal Penalties

GP § 4-402(b) provides for a criminal fine not to exceed $1,000 for any person who willfully or knowingly violates the Act. 61 Opinions of the Attorney General 698 (1976); 65 Opinions of the Attorney General 365 (1980). This section applies to any person, not just to custodians or agency employees.

GP § 4-402(a)(3) also provides that a person may not "by false pretenses, bribery, or theft, gain access to or obtain a copy of a personal record if disclosure of the personal record to the person is prohibited by [the Act]." This provision was added to the law to protect an individual's privacy. See Governor's Information Practices Commission, Final Report 549-50 (1982). These "personal records" are the individually identifiable public records defined in GP § 4-501(a).

2. Disciplinary Action

When a court finds that the custodian acted “arbitrarily or capriciously” in withholding a public record, it is to refer the matter to the appointing authority of the custodian for appropriate disciplinary action. GP § 4-362(e)(1). The appointing authority must investigate the matter and take such disciplinary action as is warranted under the circumstances. GP § 4-362(e)(2).

3. Unlawful Disclosure or Use of Personal Records

GP § 4-401(a) authorizes an award of actual damages, attorney fees and litigation costs against:

A person, including an officer or employee of a governmental unit . . . if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that:

(1) (i) the person willfully and knowingly allows inspection or use of a public record in violation of [the Act]; and

(ii) the public record names or, with reasonable certainty, otherwise identifies the individual by an identifying factor such as:

1. an address;
2. a description;
3. a fingerprint or voice print;
4. a number; or
5. a picture; or

(2) the person willfully and knowingly obtains, discloses, or uses personal information in violation of § 4-320 of [the Act].

Paragraph (1) of this provision applies to personal records defined by GP § 4-501, while paragraph (2) applies to personal information, defined by GP § 4-101(f), within Motor Vehicle Administration records. This section authorizes actual damages against officers or employees of a governmental unit and any other “person” who has willfully and knowingly violated the law. See GP § 1-114 (defining “person”); see also ACLU v. Leopold, 223 Md. App. 97, 121 (2015) (county was an “entity” within the definition of “person” in § 1-101 of the State Government Article, which applied to the PIA prior to its recodification in the General Provisions Article). This provision is not itself a basis for denying a PIA request. Rather, it is an additional sanction for failing to comply with PIA provisions that prohibit disclosure of certain “personal records” and certain “personal information” in records of the Motor Vehicle Administration. Police Patrol Security Systems v. Prince George’s County, 378 Md. 702, 718 (2003). The sanction also applies to the misuse of personal information that was legitimately collected. See Leopold, 223 Md. at 116-18.

4. Disclosure of Certain Information to the Attorney General

A custodian is protected from civil and criminal penalties if the custodian transfers or discloses the content of any public record to the Attorney General as provided in § 5-313 of the State Personnel and Pensions Article. GP § 4-403. Section 5-313, part of the “Whistleblower Law,” authorizes State employees to disclose to the Attorney General information otherwise made confidential by law.

Chapter 9: Research Access

Under GP § 4-501, the official custodian, in his or her discretion, may grant access to otherwise nondisclosable personal records for research purposes when certain safeguards are followed. The rationale for this provision was explained by the Governor's Information Practices Commission:

An individual entrusting a government agency with sensitive, personally identifiable information has a right to expect that the agency will handle the information with the care and confidentiality it deserves. For example, the Commission asserts that the privacy interests of a record subject regarding personally identifiable medical information clearly is greater than the public's right to inspect that data.

The Commission believes, however, that there may be certain situations in which a significant public purpose would be served by the examination of such data by researchers. Without question, society has benefited immeasurably by the advances in medical research over the past decades. Yet many of these advances would not have been possible without access to personally identifiable data.

The Commission feels that a mechanism should be established to permit access to personally identifiable information for meritorious research projects while, at the same time, protecting the privacy rights of the records subjects. The Commission believes that the best way to accomplish both goals is to require researchers to meet certain specified conditions prior to the release of personally identifiable data. First of all, a researcher should be required to provide a written statement to the custodian explaining the purpose of the research project, the nature of the records needed to achieve the project's goals, and the specific safeguards that will be taken to protect the identities of the records' subjects. The Commission also firmly believes that the researcher should agree that he will not contact the records subjects in any way without the prior approval and monitoring of the custodian. Third, the Commission feels that the data should not be released unless the custodian is convinced of the adequacy of the researcher's proposed safeguards to prevent the public identification of the records subjects. Finally, the researcher should be required to execute an agreement with the custodian delineating all of the above points and attesting to the fact that failure to abide by the conditions of the agreement would constitute a breach of contract.

Governor's Information Practices Commission, Final Report at 545-46 (1982). The language of the amendment and the rationale supplied by the Commission indicate that researchers may use this method to gain access to personal records even where a law other than the Public Information Act bars disclosure. Thus, the amendment has general effect beyond the PIA.

Chapter 10:

The Right to Correction or Amendment of Public Records

Under GP § 4-502, a person in interest may request that a State agency correct or amend public records, including personnel files, that the person has a right to inspect and believes are inaccurate or incomplete. Local agencies are not covered by this section. Under some circumstances, death certificates are subject to correction pursuant to GP § 4-502. 1992 Md. Laws, ch. 547.¹

A. Agency Responsibility

Within 30 days after receiving a written request for correction or amendment, the agency must inform the requestor either that the requested change has been made or give written notice of the agency's refusal and the reason for it. GP § 4-502(c). Once informed of a refusal, the person may file with the agency a statement of the reasons for the requested change and for the disagreement with the agency's decision. The agency must then include this statement in any disclosure of the public records to a third party. GP § 4-502(d). If the unit is an agency subject to the contested case procedures of the Administrative Procedure Act, the person may seek administrative and judicial review of the agency's decision to deny the requested change or of any failure by the unit to provide the statement to a third party. GP § 4-502(e).

B. Enforcement

GP § 4-502 provides for administrative and judicial review pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act. The judicial review provisions of GP § 4-362 are not triggered in this situation, because a denial of the "right to inspect" has not occurred.

¹ Chapter 547 reversed an opinion of this office concluding that the PIA records correction mechanism was not available for correction of death certificates. 76 Opinions of the Attorney General 276 (1991). The term "person in interest" is specially defined for purposes of correction of a death certificate. See GP § 4-101(e).

See Bill Review Letter from Attorney General Sachs to Governor Hughes re: House Bill 862 (April 21, 1983).

C. Regulations

The Office of the Attorney General has developed model regulations to implement GP § 4-502. See Appendix F, Chapter 2. Regulations based on earlier revisions of this model have been adopted by several State agencies. See, e.g. COMAR 11.01.15 (regulations of the Department of Transportation) and COMAR 15.01.06 (regulations of the Department of Agriculture).

Chapter 11: Restrictions on the Creation and Collection of Personal Records

Concerns about individual privacy prompted the General Assembly to prohibit a unit of the State or of a local government from creating “personal records” absent a clearly established need. GP § 4-501(b).¹ A “personal record” is defined as one that “names or, with reasonable certainty, otherwise identifies an individual by an identifying factor such as” an address, description, fingerprint, voice print, number, or picture. GP § 4-501(a).

The statute also mandates that State agencies collect personal information from the person in interest to the greatest extent practicable. GP § 4-501(c)(2). The person in interest is to be informed of: (1) the purpose for which the personal information is collected; (2) the consequences of refusing to provide the information; (3) the right to inspect, amend, or correct personal records; (4) whether personal information is generally available for public inspection; and (5) whether the information is shared with any other entity. GP § 4-501(c)(3).

The restrictions do not apply to certain personal records, including the collection of personal information related to the enforcement of criminal laws or the administration of the penal system, certain investigatory materials, records accepted by the State Archivist, information collected in conjunction with certain research projects, and personal records that the Secretary of Budget and Management exempts by regulation. GP § 4-501(c)(5). In addition, these provisions may not be construed to preempt or conflict with provisions concerning medical records under Title 4, Subtitle 3 of the Health-General Article. 2000 Md. Laws, ch. 4, § 2. Finally, each unit of State government is required to post its privacy policies concerning collection of personal information on its internet web site. GP § 4-501(c)(4).

¹ A provision outside of the PIA itself calls for agencies to keep only the information about a person that is needed to accomplish a governmental purpose. GP § 4-102.

- (A) the denial by the Commission of the license or permit to Wanda Know which occurred on August 17, 2015; and
- (B) any studies, statistics, reports, recommendations, or other records that treat in any fashion the Commission's actions, practices, or procedures concerning the granting or denial of licenses or permits during the last three fiscal years.

Please advise me as to the cost, if any, for inspecting the records described above. I anticipate that I will want copies of some or all of the records sought. If you have

SAMPLE 10-DAY LETTER (or E-MAIL)

Connie Have, Esquire

Baltimore, Maryland 21200

Ms. Have:

The License Commission has received your request under the Public Information Act, Md. Code Ann., Gen. Prov. (“GP”) §§ 4-101–4-601, seeking records related to the Commission’s denial of a license or permit to Wanda Know and other materials related to the Commission’s licensing practices. The Commission received your request on September 2, 2015, and began to process it. I write now to advise you that it will take us more than 10 working days to produce the records, to give you the date by which we expect to be able to do that, and to explain why we are unable to produce them more quickly. I write also to provide an estimate of the costs of producing the records.

With regard to the time it is taking to make the records available to you, the second part of your request—seeking materials related to the Commission’s license review process in general—encompasses a large volume of materials, some of which were located in off-site storage and in the Commission’s satellite offices, and it took some time to locate and retrieve them. We are now reviewing the collected materials to determine whether they are, in whole or in part, exempt from disclosure under the Act.

As for when we can make the records available, we expect that the review process will take between 10 and 20 hours to complete. If so, we anticipate that we will be able to respond to your request by September 25. I do not yet know whether all of the records are subject to inspection, but, if any are to be withheld, the response will explain the reason for that.

As to the cost, we expect that our response will generate a fee between $250 and $700, depending on the time and hourly rates of the individual staff and attorneys who must conduct the review, and with the first two hours provided free of charge. In addition, there would be a copy charge of $.25 per page should you want copies of the responsive materials. We anticipate that the additional copy charge would be between $100 and $150.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions or concerns regarding the Commission's processing of your request.

SAMPLE DENIAL LETTER

September 25, 2015

Connie Have, Esquire
1000 Lawyer Building
Baltimore, Maryland 21200

Dear Ms. Have:

I have received your letter dated August 31, 2015, in which you request certain records under the Public Information Act, Annotated Code of Maryland, General Provisions Article ("GP"), § 4-101 et seq., on behalf of your client, Wanda Know. In particular, you seek to inspect and copy all records in my custody and control pertaining to the following:

- (A) the denial by the Commission of the license or permit to Wanda Know which occurred on August 17, 2015, and
- (B) any studies, statistics, reports, recommendations, or other records that treat in any fashion the Commission's actions, practices, or procedures concerning the granting or denial of licenses or permits during the last three fiscal years.

My staff has collected those records in our custody that are responsive to your request. You may inspect all of the records we have compiled with two exceptions.

First, 13 emails between an Assistant Attorney General and the Commission's Chairman and 2 confidential legal memoranda prepared by the Assistant Attorney General for the Chairman are subject to the attorney-client privilege and are therefore protected from disclosure by GP § 4-301 as privileged or confidential records. These same materials are also covered by the deliberative process privilege, and thus exempt from disclosure under GP § 4-301, and qualify as intra-agency memoranda exempt from disclosure under GP § 4-344. All of these records are internal materials prepared by counsel to inform the Commission of the different options available to it in considering Ms. Know's application. In accordance with GP § 4-343, I find that the disclosure of these materials would be contrary to the public interest because it would discourage the Commission's receipt of full and frank advice.

Second, I am also denying access to a portion of an investigatory file of this agency concerning your client. This file was compiled as part of a law enforcement investigation of this agency and is therefore covered by GP § 4-351. While your client is a person in interest as to these records, complete disclosure of the file would be contrary to the public interest since inspection would disclose the identity of a confidential source and would also disclose investigative techniques and procedures of the Commission. Apart from that portion, the balance of the investigatory file on your client is available for your inspection.

The cost of searching for and preparing the records for disclosure comes to $380, which represents 16 hours of staff time at prorated hourly salaries of $25 and $40 per hour, with the first two hours provided free of charge. You may also obtain copies of the records. This agency charges a fee of $.25 per page for copies. If you wish to inspect the records that are available to your client under the Act, please call my administrative assistant, Madge Public, to arrange for a mutually convenient time.

Pursuant to GP § 4-362, your client is entitled to seek judicial review of this decision. Your client also has the option to file a complaint with the Public Information Act Compliance Board concerning the amount of the fee charged, see GP § 4-1A-01 et seq., and may also refer any concerns about this decision to the Public Access Ombudsman pursuant to GP § 4-1B-01 et seq. Also, if you have any questions about this letter, please feel free to contact me.

Sincerely,

- A. Be on pages no larger than 8½ x 11 inches in size;
- B. Use only one side of each page; and

C. Consist of no more than five pages.

.10 Providing Statement of Disagreement.

If a person in interest files a statement of disagreement concerning a public record under Regulations .08 and .09 of this chapter, the Department shall provide a copy of the statement whenever the Department discloses the public record to a third party.

.11 Administrative Review.

A. A person may request administrative review under this regulation if the Department:

(1) Has refused the person's request to correct or amend a public record under Regulation .07 of this chapter;

(3) Has not provided a statement of disagreement to a third party under Regulation .10 of this chapter.

B. A request for review shall be filed with the Secretary within 30 days after the requester is advised of the Department's action.

C. The review proceedings shall be conducted in accordance with State Government Article, Title 10, Subtitle 2, Annotated Code of Maryland, and the administrative hearing regulations of the Department.

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

on the

MARYLAND PUBLIC INFORMATION ACT

A. Scope of the Public Information Act; Disclosable Records

97 Opinions of the Attorney General 95 (2012)

No exception protects from disclosure the personal e-mail addresses that government officials collect for purposes of circulating a newsletter; providing guidance on the process of seeking a protective order from the circuit court under what is now GP § 4-358.

93 Opinions of the Attorney General 138 (2008)

Provision of records required by criminal discovery rules is distinct from provision of records under the PIA.

92 Opinions of the Attorney General 137 (2007)

Although the PIA restricts access to certain student information in school system records, the PIA yields to both federal law and provisions in the Education Article of the Maryland Code governing access to student records.

92 Opinions of the Attorney General 12 (2007)

Although a local ordinance ordinarily cannot restrict access to public records in a manner inconsistent with the PIA, a local ethics ordinance restricting access to records regarding pending complaints and identifying information in advisory opinions is valid to the extent that its provisions are consistent with Maryland Public Ethics Law and model ordinance developed by the State Ethics Commission.

90 Opinions of the Attorney General 45 (2005)

While fire dispatch records are ordinarily open to inspection, medical information concerning an identified individual should be redacted.

Note: These Opinions were based on the statutes in effect when they were issued. Changes to both the PIA and the statute governing the disclosure of information may have made some opinions obsolete.

86 Opinions of the Attorney General 226 (2001)

Although a statute prohibits disclosure of an inmate's case record to the public, the Division of Correction may reasonably construe prohibition as not extending to projected date of inmate's release on mandatory supervision.

83 Opinions of the Attorney General 192 (1998)

The gross amount of bonuses or performance awards paid to county appointed officials or merit system employees is available to the public under the PIA.

82 Opinions of the Attorney General 111 (1997)

An individual is generally entitled under the PIA to Motor Vehicle Administration records related to a review of the individual's fitness to drive, including records of the MVA's Medical Advisory Board. However, under what is now GP § 4-351(b)(4), the MVA may treat as a confidential source someone who writes to the MVA concerning an individual's fitness to drive if the informant would reasonably expect confidentiality.

81 Opinions of the Attorney General 140 (1996)

"Public record" includes printed version of e-mail as the paper will itself be a "public record," but even if message was never printed, the version of the e-mail retained in the computer's storage would also be a "public record."

80 Opinions of the Attorney General 257 (1995)

The definition of "public record" does not extend to records that are required to be maintained by an applicant for a residential child care facility license but that never come into possession of the State agency.

79 Opinions of the Attorney General 366 (1994)

Although personnel records and other information regarding applicants for employees in Baltimore City Public Schools would otherwise be protected from inspection by the PIA, disclosure was authorized by virtue of a federal district court order.

79 Opinions of the Attorney General 354 (1994)

The criteria for determining eligibility for representation by the Public Defender are open for public inspection unless otherwise provided by law.

76 Opinions of the Attorney General 287 (1991)

Requests from the Legislative Auditor in connection with an audit are not governed by the PIA.

73 Opinions of the Attorney General 12 (1988)

Letters to the Agriculture Department complaining about gypsy moth spraying are generally disclosable.

71 Opinions of the Attorney General 282 (1986)

County ethics ordinance requires disclosure of certain information ordinarily within exceptions to disclosure.

71 Opinions of the Attorney General 288 (1986)

Tape recordings of calls to 911 Emergency Telephone System Centers are public records but portions of the recordings may fall within certain exceptions to disclosure.

71 Opinions of the Attorney General 318 (1986)

Federal and State statutes regarding the confidentiality of tax-related information prohibit disclosure of information concerning the personal and business affairs of identifiable taxpayers. However, (1) non-confidential information about the taxpayer's plans to engage in certain regulated business activities or the taxpayer's authority to collect the retail sales tax and (2) information that cannot be associated with any particular taxpayer must be disclosed to the public upon request.

68 Opinions of the Attorney General 330 (1983)

Individual criminal trial transcripts in the hands of the Public Defender are public records.

Opinion No. 81-034 (unpublished) (1981)

Under the Education Article of the Maryland Code and the Public Information Act, a County Council is entitled, as part of its review of the county school board's annual budget request, to receive supporting budgetary details that include the actual salaries paid to school board employees.

Opinion No. 79-024 (unpublished) (1979)

A managerial audit letter prepared for the Board of Education is a public document and, as such, the County Commissioners and the Director of Finance are entitled by law to a copy of the letter.

Opinion No. 79-032 (unpublished) (1979)

The Retail Sales Tax Division of the Comptroller of the Treasury must provide the State Department of Personnel with a list of the names of accounts that have been audited by the Division.

Opinion No. 78-085 (unpublished) (1978)

Neither the Insurance Commissioner nor Maryland Automobile Insurance Fund may deny the Legislative Auditor access to the report of examination of MAIF's Uninsured Division and the related work papers.

63 Opinions of the Attorney General 502 (1978)

Juvenile records may be released to the Division of Parole and Probation by the various custodians of juvenile records without a court order, but the better practice would be to get a court order. The Division of Parole and Probation may deny disclosure of a particular record if it was compiled for a law enforcement or prosecution purpose.

63 Opinions of the Attorney General 543 (1978)

Arrest logs are public records and the only grounds for denying public access to them would be pursuant to Article 76A, § 3(f).

62 Opinions of the Attorney General 396 (1977)

Any member of the public is entitled to inspect and copy registration records of the Board of Election Supervisors unless there is a “special order of the Board” or a “reasonable regulation” by the Board to the contrary.

62 Opinions of the Attorney General 579 (1977)

Information relating to legal fees paid by Maryland Automobile Insurance Fund to individual defense counsel engaged to represent the agency or its insured must be divulged upon demand.

62 Opinions of the Attorney General 712 (1977)

The Public Information Act requires the property tax assessment appeal boards to permit any person to inspect any of their records with certain exceptions.

Opinion No. 77-013 (unpublished) (1977)

The PIA requires the Department of Licensing and Regulation to honor requests for copies of numerical listings of all licensees, assembled as part of an annual routine of issuing renewal licenses.

Opinion No. 76-30 (unpublished) (1976)

Salary information with respect to employees at Prince George's Community College generally is subject to disclosure under the Public Information Act.

Opinion No. 76-142 (unpublished) (1976)

The author's name on a letter to the Maryland State Board of Ethics is considered a "public record" and does not fall within any of the exceptions to the requirement of disclosure.

61 Opinions of the Attorney General 702 (1976)

The Maryland Public Information Act does not in general authorize clerks of courts to deny public inspection of marriage records, no matter what the intended use.

60 Opinions of the Attorney General 498 (1975)

The nature of mileage forms, the purpose for which they are kept, and the place where they are kept make it clear that they are not personnel records, but are vehicle records only and, as such, they are public records open for inspection.

60 Opinions of the Attorney General 600 (1975)

Disclosure of students' names and addresses to third parties by school officials even without parents' consent is not prohibited by the PIA. However, disclosure may be prohibited by a federal statute, the Family Education Rights & Privacy Act of 1974, "the Buckley Amendment." 20 U.S.C. § 1232g.

59 Opinions of the Attorney General 59 (1974)

A list provided by the Bank Commissioner of a bank's bona fide shareholders or subscribers showing the name, residence, and actual number of shares subscribed to and paid for are not exempt from the general requirement of disclosure. However, personal financial statements may not be released.

59 Opinions of the Attorney General 586 (1974)

County boards of education are not prohibited by the PIA from releasing the names and addresses of students within their schools. However, disclosure may be prohibited by a federal statute, the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, "the Buckley Amendment," 20 U.S.C. § 1232g.

Opinion No. 74-239 (unpublished) (1974)

Disclosure of the names of all lawyers, doctors, and independent adjustors used by the Maryland Automobile Insurance Fund is compelled under the Public Information Act.

58 Opinions of the Attorney General 14 (1973)

The State Department of Assessments and Taxation is barred from permitting inspection of a taxpayer's assessment worksheet by anyone but the taxpayer to whom the property is assessed and officers of the State and subdivision affected.

58 Opinions of the Attorney General 53 (1973)

The Act applies to all members of the general public and does not make exception for any segment thereof.

57 Opinions of the Attorney General 500 (1972)

All materials considered in connection with appointment or promotion in the Police Department are open to inspection but this does not extend to the identity of the applicant's examiner or examiners.

57 Opinions of the Attorney General 518 (1972)

Criminal records that the court orders expunged need not be physically destroyed, but should be segregated and public and private access can be denied.

B. Role of the Custodian93 Opinions of the Attorney General 138 (2008)

The PIA does not provide authority for a State's Attorney to charge a criminal defendant for access to records to which defendant is entitled under Maryland Rules governing discovery; for other records, reasonable charges may be imposed.

68 Opinions of the Attorney General 330 (1983)

Public Defender is "official custodian" of trial transcript obtained by the Public Defender's office in the course of its legal representation of an indigent defendant.

65 Opinions of the Attorney General 365 (1980)

If a public official uses his or her public office to obtain the personnel file of another person, the public official becomes a de facto "custodian" of that file, subject to the statutory obligation imposed by the Public Information Act on a "custodian" to deny access to the file by unauthorized persons; as "custodian," the public official is subject to criminal penalties applicable to violations of the statute.

64 Opinions of the Attorney General 236 (1979)

Determination whether disclosure is contrary to the public interest is within the discretion of the custodian.

63 Opinions of the Attorney General 197 (1978)

If the Public Safety Data Center consolidates with the Baltimore Computer Utility, the Secretary of Public Safety and Correctional Services would continue to be the "official custodian" of the criminal history records stored in the shared system and the Maryland State Police would continue to be the "custodians" of such records.

C. Right of Access90 Opinions of the Attorney General 45 (2005)

While a parent of a minor ordinarily is a "person in interest" for purposes of accessing records pertaining to the minor, that status is lost if the parents' parental rights have been terminated.

81 Opinions of the Attorney General 154 (1996)

Waiver of fee is dependent upon a number of relevant factors and cannot be based solely on the poverty of the requester or the cost to the agency.

71 Opinions of the Attorney General 318 (1986)

In complying with any request for disclosable information, the Retail Sales Tax Division may impose a reasonable charge for the costs incurred, including the cost of all computer time actually used.

63 Opinions of the Attorney General 453 (1979)

The Legislative Auditor has broad statutory authority to examine records of State agencies, including medical records of the Department of Health & Mental Hygiene, in assessing the performance of the Department.

60 Opinions of the Attorney General 563 (1973)

Personnel files may be available to investigators representing the Division of Fiscal Research for purposes connected with the performance of the Division's statutory duties.

58 Opinions of the Attorney General 563 (1973)

The Public Information Act speaks only of the “right of inspection” of public records or “access to” such records. It does not compel a custodian to take affirmative action to disclose information absent a request.

56 Opinions of the Attorney General 461 (1971)

The Public Information Act does not guarantee the right to the requested information to any specific form. The State Department of Assessments and Taxation is not required to give information in the form of a duplicate data processing tape but may give a printout instead.

D. Exceptions to Disclosure

1. Exceptions Based on Other Sources of Law

87 Opinions of the Attorney General 76 (2002)

Absent court order, State's Attorney's Office may not prematurely provide community association with search warrant information for use in pursuing drug nuisance abatement action.

86 Opinions of the Attorney General 94 (2001)

A local ordinance does not constitute "other law" for purposes of what is now GP § 4-301 and cannot provide independent basis for an exemption from disclosure under the PIA.

82 Opinions of the Attorney General 15 (1997)

While a document is not confidential as a matter of law merely because it is prepared by a county attorney, the attorney-client privilege or other appropriate privileges are available to protect the confidentiality of a document and prevent disclosure under the PIA to the extent the document is encompassed by those privileges.

81 Opinions of the Attorney General 164 (1996)

Agency recipient of a management letter that is partly privileged may decline to disclose those parts of the letter to another government agency, unless other law requires disclosure.

66 Opinions of the Attorney General 98 (1981)

Notwithstanding the General Assembly's broad authority to inquire into the State's fiscal affairs, budget recommendations requested by and submitted to the Governor in confidence by various executive agencies are subject to Executive Privilege and, as such, are privileged from disclosure to the General Assembly.

64 Opinions of the Attorney General 236 (1979)

The common law doctrine of grand jury secrecy makes records obtained by a State's Attorney's office solely for use in a grand jury investigation non-disclosable under § 3(a)(iv), as amended, now codified at GP § 4-301, of the Public Information Act.

63 Opinions of the Attorney General 659 (1978)

The Maryland Public Information Act may not be used to disclose birth and death certificates, or the identifying information contained thereon, since it is confidential by law, but autopsy reports may be obtained from the custodian of such reports under this statute.

61 Opinions of the Attorney General 340 (1976)

The State Public Information Act generally denies access to educational records “unless otherwise provided by law.” It is permissible for a representative of the State Department of Education to examine the academic records of certain students at Morgan State University.

Opinion No. 75-060 (unpublished) (1975)

Release of information that a specific individual is currently a patient in a State mental hospital is contrary to former Article 59, § 19 and, therefore falls within the PIA exception for records protected by other laws.

2. Discretionary Exceptions

92 Opinions of the Attorney General 26 (2007)

Request for mug shots in custody of police department should be analyzed as a request for an investigatory record under the PIA. Thus, a mug shot must be disclosed unless the custodian determines disclosure would be contrary to the public interest.

89 Opinions of the Attorney General 31 (2004)

If, in carrying out its statutory mandate, an agency is in possession of investigatory records obtained from another agency, it may apply the investigatory records exemption to withhold the records if the agency that provided the records would itself deny access under the investigatory record exemption.

86 Opinions of the Attorney General 94 (2001)

In determining whether an investigation is for “law enforcement purposes,” the proper focus is on whether the agency’s investigatory function is part of an overall scheme designed to review specific instances of alleged improper conduct – not the array of possible sanctions that might result from the investigation.

77 Opinions of the Attorney General 183 (1992)

Custodian of investigatory records has discretion whether to disclose name and address of victim of crime.

71 Opinions of the Attorney General 305 (1986)

Agency's citizen response plan log that contains information concerning citizen complaints is not ordinarily an investigatory record exempt from disclosure.

64 Opinions of the Attorney General 236 (1979)

The Police Department must disclose investigative reports, or a severable part of them, unless disclosure would be contrary to the public interest.

Opinion No. 75-202 (unpublished) (1975)

The report of the Maryland Automobile Insurance Fund Advisory Board subcommittee may be withheld from public inspection in the discretion of the executive director and the Board of Trustees of MAIF.

58 Opinions of the Attorney General 53 (1973)

Access may be denied to the report prepared for the Maryland Transportation Authority by an independent engineering consulting firm to assist the Authority in preparing its defense to claims filed against it. Disclosure of the claims, resulting in a potentially significant cost to the public, is clearly contrary to public interest.

58 Opinions of the Attorney General 563 (1973)

The custodian of Police Department records may deny public access to arrest records only upon a determination that disclosure would be contrary to the public interest.

3. Mandatory Exceptions

90 Opinions of the Attorney General 45 (2005)

Medical information recorded by dispatcher during course of 911 call is to be redacted prior to release of fire department "event report" or dispatch.

86 Opinions of the Attorney General 94 (2001)

Personnel records exemption does not preclude municipal agency from sharing personnel records with another municipal agency that is charged with personnel administration responsibilities to the extent necessary for the latter agency to carry out its responsibilities.

82 Opinions of the Attorney General 65 (1997)

Prohibition against disclosure of “personnel records” does not preclude school officials from disclosing to a student’s parent oral information gained through reported observations concerning employee’s conduct even if information subsequently was memorialized, thus resulting in a “record.” Furthermore, certain information gained through investigation of school system personnel about a student may be disclosed as long as the confidentiality of employee-related information derived from personnel record is preserved.

79 Opinions of the Attorney General 362 (1994)

Performance evaluation reports on judges, lawyers’ responses on judicial performance questionnaires, and the compiled data for each judge are exempt. Members of the public are entitled to the composite data that do not identify particular judges.

78 Opinions of the Attorney General 291 (1993)

Employee-related information stemming from a complaint about discriminatory behavior is a personnel record that may not be disclosed to third parties.

77 Opinions of the Attorney General 188 (1992)

Value or description of abandoned property constitutes personal financial information that may not be disclosed.

71 Opinions of the Attorney General 305 (1986)

Exemption for licensing records applies only to records of licensees who are individuals, and not to those who are business entities.

71 Opinions of the Attorney General 297 (1986)

A tape recording of an involuntary admission hearing may be disclosed only to a patient or authorized representative.

71 Opinions of the Attorney General 368 (1986)

Under certain conditions, information about the handling of a child abuse case by the local Department of Social Services may be disclosed.

69 Opinions of the Attorney General 231 (1984)

Architectural and engineering plans that are submitted to a county as a prerequisite to issuance of a building permit are public records and must be disclosed unless they contain commercial information that would give competitors of the submitter a concrete advantage in obtaining future work on that or a similar project.

68 Opinions of the Attorney General 335 (1983)

A custodian must deny inspection of letters of reference — solicited or unsolicited — that concern a person's fitness for public office or employment.

Opinion No. 83-044 (unpublished) (1983)

While performing evaluations of local directors of social services, local boards have the right to examine internal Department of Human Resources documents that relate to performance but may not use or disseminate the information in contravention of any confidentiality requirements imposed by Article 88A, § 36 or General Provisions Article § 4-315.

63 Opinions of the Attorney General 432 (1978)

Nonprofit health service plans may not release personal medical record information, without the consent of the individuals, to employers who sponsor and maintain group health plans. The only exception would be if the information was released without identifying the subscribers.

63 Opinions of the Attorney General 355 (1978)

The custodian shall determine if data is a “trade secret” or “confidential commercial or financial data.” The mere assertion by a vendor that commercial data is confidential is not sufficient. One important indicium of confidentiality or privilege is whether the records are customarily so regarded in the trade or industry.

Opinion No. 77-006 (unpublished) (1977)

Public Information Act does not prohibit the disclosure of a State, county, or municipal job or position description.

Opinion No. 75-071 (unpublished) (1975)

The information contained in the application for State Certification of Conformance for Hospitals and Related Institutions and/or Federal § 1122 Certification for Reimbursement of Capital Expenditures should be open to the public unless it is confidential.

Opinion No. 73-099 (unpublished) (1973)

The Comptroller may release information relating to taxpayers to the Treasury Department of the United States.

60 Opinions of the Attorney General 559 (1975)

Where an employee of the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene has filed a claim for Workmen's Compensation with the State Accident Fund, its investigators should be provided access to information concerning the claimant, or otherwise pertinent to the claim, contained in the Department's personnel file.

60 Opinions of the Attorney General 600 (1975)

Degree information, including credits earned by teachers in specific school systems, should not be disclosed.

4. Preventing Disclosure Where No Exception Applies

97 Opinions of the Attorney General 95 (2012)

Providing guidance on the process of seeking a protective order from the circuit court under what is now GP § 4-358 when no exception protects from disclosure the personal e-mail addresses that government officials collect for purposes of circulating a newsletter.

Opinion No. 76-142 (unpublished) (1976)

If disclosure would do substantial injury to public interest, a custodian may seek a court order to permit denial or restriction of access.

E. Procedures for Making a Request for Inspection or Copying

81 Opinions of the Attorney General 154 (1996)

Waiver of fee is dependent upon a number of relevant factors and cannot be based solely on the poverty of the requester or the cost to the agency.

61 Opinions of the Attorney General 698 (1976)

There is no requirement that an applicant give a reason for the request.

F. Liability of Persons Who Violate the Act

65 Opinions of the Attorney General 365 (1980)

If a public official uses his or her public office to obtain the personnel file of another person, the public official becomes a de facto “custodian” of that file, subject to the statutory obligation imposed by the Public Information Act on a “custodian” to deny access to the file by unauthorized persons; as “custodian,” the public official is subject to criminal penalties applicable to violations of the statute.

61 Opinions of the Attorney General 698 (1976)

A person who violates the Public Information Act may be subject to criminal and/or civil action.

G. Correction of Records

76 Opinions of the Attorney General 276 (1991)

PIA procedures for correction of records do not apply to a death certificate. (Reversed by subsequent legislation. See 1992 Md. Laws, ch. 547.)

RESPONDING TO REQUESTS
UNDER THE
MARYLAND PUBLIC INFORMATION ACT:
A SUGGESTED PROCESS

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Brian E. Frosh, Attorney General
200 Saint Paul Place
Baltimore, Maryland 21202

Revised October 2015

RESPONDING TO REQUESTS UNDER THE MARYLAND PUBLIC INFORMATION ACT: A SUGGESTED PROCESS

The basic mandate of the Public Information Act (“PIA”) is to enable people to have access to government records without unnecessary cost or delay. Custodians have a responsibility to provide such access, unless the requested records fall within one of the exceptions provided in the PIA. The keys to compliance with the PIA are:

(1) a clear process for handling requests for records;

(2) quality training about the law for frontline personnel; and

(3) the same attitude of professionalism and customer service expected for other agency functions.

The following guidelines are intended to offer custodians of records practical ways to enhance compliance with the letter and spirit of the PIA. They reflect best practices, but they are not meant to cover all aspects of the law. Nor are they intended to create any legal rights for any person; the Act itself and agency regulations that govern the handling of PIA requests set forth the legal rights and obligations under the PIA.

1. IDENTIFY KEY PERSONNEL

Who receives requests for records at the agency? Who should respond to them?

A. Designate an agency PIA coordinator (or more than one, if need be) who is responsible for PIA compliance. The person the agency identifies as its PIA “representative” for purposes of receiving PIA requests would be a logical choice.

B. Set clear guidelines for those who handle PIA requests; for example, make sure that whoever opens the mail knows to whom a PIA request should be sent and the importance of delivering the request promptly.

2. SEPARATE THE SIMPLE FROM THE UNUSUAL OR COMPLEX

Are the requested records in a category that you have previously identified as available to anyone immediately, no questions asked?

A. If YES:

(i) Make the records available immediately for inspection, even if the request is made orally;

(ii) If the requester wants copies (paper or electronic), charge no more than a reasonable, pre-set fee.

You should consider designating commonly requested documents that are available on this basis.

B. If NO:

(i) If the request was made orally, ask the requester to write out the request. You may find it useful to devise a form for this purpose.

(ii) Promptly send the form to the person in the agency designated to handle

PIA requests (or to the person or persons who handle this type of PIA request).

Should you ask requesters who they are or why they want the records?

In general, no. In some circumstances, however, you will need to identify who the requester is. Some records (e.g., medical files, personnel files) that are not available to the general public are available to the subject of the records, who is called a “person in interest” in the PIA. If the request involves a type of record for which a person in interest has special rights, you need to find out if the requester is a person in interest.

3. INFORM THE REQUESTER PROMPTLY OF PROBLEMS WITH THE REQUEST

Does the request cover records in the agency’s custody? Are they described in a way that allows the records to be found after a reasonable search?

A. If you can’t search for the records because they don’t exist (there is no duty to create records) or you don’t have them, tell the requester promptly (within, at most, 10 days); if you know that another agency has the records, tell the requester; if feasible, you may offer to forward the request to that agency.

B. If you can’t search for the records because the request is unclear or unreasonably broad, promptly ask the requester to clarify or narrow the request. If you think it would be helpful, you may offer to assist the requester in reframing the request. Do not simply wait 30 days and deny the request only because it is unclear or unreasonably broad.

C. If there is a reason why the search or review of the records will take more than 10 working days, send the requester a letter or email within that 10-day period explaining the reason for the delay, the time needed to respond, and an estimate of the range of fees that might be charged.

4. RETRIEVE – REVIEW – RESPOND

A. If your agency has the records and can find those covered by the request after a reasonable search, promptly retrieve the records.

B. Review the records, with legal assistance as needed, to determine their status under the PIA.

C. Decide whether your review requires information from outside the agency and, if so, request it right away. Two common situations:

(i) A record would be available to a person in interest, but not to a member of the general public. If applicable, ask for the information you need to determine whether the requester is a person in interest.

(ii) A record contains information that appears to be confidential commercial or financial information. Ask the person or entity that submitted the information whether the information is regarded as confidential and, if so, why.

D. Determine if any of the exemptions in the PIA (or in another law) apply to the record or a portion of the record.

(i) If an applicable exemption requires that all of the information be withheld from disclosure, withhold the entire record unless redacting all identifying information would remove the record from scope of the exemption. If only part of the information is exempt, redact the exempt portion.

(ii) If an applicable exemption permits, but does not require, that information be withheld from disclosure, carefully consider how you will exercise the discretion that the law gives you. In general, disclose the record unless doing so would cause a harm to the public interest that you can describe.

(iii) If no exemption applies, disclose the record unless, within 10 days, your agency will go to court for an order allowing you to withhold the record on the ground that disclosure would cause “substantial injury to the public interest.” Courts will likely grant such orders only in extraordinary circumstances.

E. Complete the retrieval and review process as quickly as possible, but in any case within 30 days of receiving the request, unless the requester agrees to an extension.

(i) If you determine that records are to be disclosed, notify the requester immediately that the records are available for inspection or copying.

(ii) If you determine that the records are to be withheld in whole or in part, promptly send the requester a letter explaining why those records are exempt from disclosure, citing legal authority and telling the requester how to seek review of your decision.

5. PROVIDE COPIES, IF REQUESTED.

A. If the requester seeks copies, provide them within a reasonable time. If the request is voluminous, discuss a mutually agreeable schedule – for example, providing copies on a rolling basis.

B. If copies are requested in an electronic or other special format, honor that request if it is possible to do so without significant cost or burden on the agency. In some circumstances, the requester may have a right to an electronic copy

6. CHARGE ONLY REASONABLE, COST-BASED FEES.

A. Search and Review Time. If you charge a fee, base the fee on the actual staff time spent responding to the request and their prorated salaries. Keep track of your time, but remember that the first two hours of search and review time are free.

B. Copies. Decide in advance what you will charge per copy. You may decide that it is more cost-effective not to charge for small numbers of copies.

C. Fee Waivers. If the requester asks that you waive the fees, you may do so if a waiver would be in the public interest or if the requester is indigent. For indigency waivers, require the requester to submit an affidavit of indigency. For other waiver requests, consider the ability of the applicant to pay, but other factors as well (e.g., whether the information is sought for a broad public purpose or for a narrow personal or commercial interest).

More information about the PIA may be found in the Attorney General’s manual, available online at: <http://www.oag.state.md.us/opengov/pia.htm>

Access to Government Records Under the Maryland Public Information Act

What is the Public Information Act?

Maryland's Public Information Act ("PIA") gives the public the right to access government records without unnecessary cost and delay.

The PIA applies to all three branches of Maryland state government as well as local government entities. The PIA is found in the General Provisions Article ("GP"), §§ 4-101 through 4-601, Annotated Code of Maryland.

It is similar to the federal Freedom of Information Act which applies to federal executive branch agencies and independent federal regulatory agencies.

The PIA grants you the right to review the available records that are disclosable and to obtain copies of those records. It does not require an agency to answer informational questions or to create a record to satisfy your request.

What is a public record?

A public record is defined as the original or copy of any documentary material in any form created or received by an agency in connection with the transaction of public business. Included in this definition are written materials, books, photographs, photocopies, films, microfilms, records, tapes, computerized records, maps, drawings and other materials.

Who can submit a PIA request?

Anyone.

Are all government records available?

No. The PIA attempts to balance the public's right to access government records with other policies that respect the privacy or confidentiality of certain information.

For example, some public records are confidential under federal or state statutes, under court rules, or under various common law privileges such as attorney-client privilege and executive privilege. GP § 4-301. The PIA itself also protects certain records from disclosure (for example, adoption records, personnel records, certain personal information in Motor Vehicle Administration records). In addition, some information contained in public records must remain confidential (for example, an individual's medical information, confidential commercial information and trade secrets). GP §§ 4-304 to 4-327 (Part II), §§ 4-328 to 4-342 (Part III). In some cases, these protections may be waived.

Other records may be withheld if the agency decides that disclosure of those records would be "contrary to the public interest." Examples of records subject to discretionary disclosure include investigatory records, information related to academic, licensing, and employment examinations, and documents of a pre-decisional and deliberative nature. GP §§ 4-343 to 4-357 (Part IV).

Do I have a right to obtain a record about me even if it is otherwise confidential under the PIA?

In some cases, yes. The PIA grants a "person in interest" a right to access some records that are otherwise not available to the public under the PIA. A person in interest is usually the person who is the subject of the record.

Whom do I contact to get access to a record under the PIA?

There is no central agency that is responsible for PIA requests. You should contact the agency that has the type of record you are seeking. If you are uncertain about what agency would have the record, you might review the "Maryland Manual" (available online at www.mdarchives.state.md.us/msa/mdmanual/html/mmtoc.html), check agency web sites, or contact your local library where the reference staff might be able to help identify the agency that has the particular type of record. As for to whom to direct your request, check the agency's website; it should have the relevant contact information. You can also check the Attorney General's website and Appendix J to this Manual, both of which have a list of the PIA representatives for various State, county, and municipal bodies.

Is there a particular form that I must use?

No, although some agencies have created request forms to help the agency respond to PIA requests.

In some cases, a telephone call to the appropriate person in a government agency may satisfy your request for a document. In other cases, you will need to submit your request in writing. Address your request to the individual the agency identifies as its PIA contact. If you do not know who that is, address your request to the agency's public information officer or to the head of the agency.

It is important that you specifically describe the records you seek so that the agency can research your request. Sometimes discussions with agency personnel will clarify your request and help the agency find the records you are seeking.

How long will it take for an agency to respond to my request?

In many instances, an agency will be able to respond to your request immediately. In fact, for some frequently requested records, an agency may already have records available on its web site. (For example, the State Department of Assessments and Taxation makes property assessment information publicly available through its web site). Otherwise, an agency is normally expected to comply with a PIA request within 30 days, but there may be instances where an agency needs additional time to locate and review the requested records.

Is there a charge for obtaining records under the PIA?

The PIA allows an agency to charge a “reasonable fee” for copies of public records.

An agency may also charge a reasonable fee for searching for a public record – a charge that may include the time required for locating and reviewing the record. The first two hours of search time are free, but an extensive search may prove time-consuming and therefore expensive. Thus, it is in both your interest and the agency’s interest to ensure that a PIA request clearly and accurately describes the records sought. Sometimes discussing your request with agency staff is the best way to gain access to the records you seek promptly and at little or no cost.

Actual fee schedules may be found in agency regulations. Agencies may choose to waive fees in particular cases.

What happens if I am dissatisfied with the agency’s response?

If an agency denies all or part of your request, it must provide you with a written explanation that includes the reason for the denial, the legal authority justifying the denial, and your appeal rights.

You have three options if you are dissatisfied with the agency’s response: (1) You can go to court if you wish to challenge any aspect of the agency’s decision and, if you prevail, potentially receive attorneys’ fees and damages; (2) If the agency has charged you more than $350 and you believe that fee to be unreasonable, you can file a complaint with the Public Information Act Compliance Board; and (3) You can initiate informal mediation of the dispute through the Public Access Ombudsman within the Office of the Attorney General.

How can I learn more about the PIA?

The Office of the Attorney General publishes a detailed legal analysis of the PIA in the Maryland Public Information Act Manual. The Manual also includes the text of the PIA and a sample request letter to help you make a PIA request. The Manual is available for purchase for $10 by sending a check to the Office of Attorney General, Opinions and Advice Division, 200 St. Paul Place, Baltimore, Maryland 21202. The manual is also available without charge on the Attorney General's website, <http://www.oag.state.md.us/Opengov/pia.htm>.

Public Information Act Representatives

(General Provisions Article § 4-503(b))

Governmental units are grouped together by jurisdiction, beginning with State agencies, then county agencies, and then municipal agencies. Note that a body that qualifies as a State entity might nevertheless be grouped with county agencies when its jurisdictional reach is limited to a particular county. Also note that this list will be updated periodically, with each update bearing its revision date in the lower left-hand corner of the page.
