FLOODPLAIN RESTORATION: PAST & PRESENT

The Historical Floodplain & Settlement:

Long ago, a floodplain was well vegetated with native plants adapted to wet conditions. These plants and root systems helped to:

- Regulate flooding
- Create wildlife habitats
- Regulate stream temperatures
- Absorb & process excess nutrients
- Cleanse & filter surface & groundwater

Early settlers were eager to build mills and dams, using water for power. Throughout Lancaster, mills sprang up on nearly every river and stream. Mill races diverted water from established streams, water was slowed, and ponds formed and filled with sediment eroded from the hillsides. What once was a lush, vegetated floodplain is now filled with thick layers of sediment. The historical streams and floodplains are now buried under 3' to 20' of legacy sediment.

As dams deteriorated or were removed, the streams cut deep channels through the sediment. Oftentimes, the stream was straightened or moved for farming. Instead of a lush wetland valley with low stream banks, the high banks erode easily and deposit sediment directly into the stream.

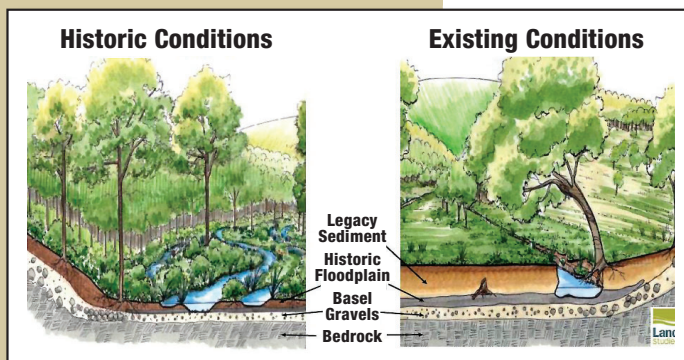

Restoration & Misconceptions:

Floodplain Restoration is a process that removes the legacy sediment deposited over the past 200 years and returns the floodplain to the pre-impaired configuration. After restoration, substantial sources of sediment and nutrients are immediately removed, improving water quality. The root systems of wetland plants in a restored floodplain also absorb excess nitrogen in the water supply and promote denitrification (permanently removing nitrogen from the watercourse).

One common misconception about Floodplain Restorations is that they are unkempt wetlands which create breeding grounds for mosquitoes. Floodplain Restorations are actually the opposite. Studies have shown that natural predators in healthy ecosystems can limit mosquito numbers by eating the mosquitos and mosquito larvae. Mosquito predators include desirable wildlife such as bats, fish, birds, turtles, frogs, and dragonflies that require stable and healthy wetland ecosystems. Healthy wetland ecosystems depend on a diverse array of native plant species. The construction of a Floodplain Restoration project introduces a wide array of native plant species by seeding and planting the restored condition. The plants selected to be re-introduced are based on the historical seed record (macrofossils) found in the buried floodplains.

Looking Back at 2019 & Looking Forward to 2020

Looking back at 2019, a lot of positive things happened in East Hempfield Township. Last Fall the Township completed a full renovation of the Police Building, expanding and upgrading the 1980's facility that was originally constructed for a dozen officers but now houses 33. This new, modern facility will help East Hempfield maintain its professional police force and the service residents have come to expect for decades to come. The Township continued the accelerated road maintenance program, spending $1.2 million paving 22 roads. This marked the 10th year of the maintenance program, where the Township has averaged over a million dollars per year on roadway maintenance, reversing the trend of roadway decline. Another segment of the A. Herr Park trail was completed, in the continued effort to promote outdoor exercise and to compliment past projects at the park, including the Dream Park. The State Road Interchange project broke ground after 10-years of design, permitting and dealing with AMTRAK issues that greatly delayed the project. This necessary project will alleviate the congestion and safety issues at the interchange, and when combined with other projects that have occurred or are planned to occur will result in a vastly improved roadway corridor to Harrisburg Pike. The design of the Centerville Road project with PennDOT continued and is estimated to go to construction in 2021. This PennDOT funded project, with a 20% match of Township funds, will rebuild Centerville Road from Columbia Avenue to Marietta Pike, expanding the interchange and widening the road to five lanes. It is worth noting that most of Centerville Road is owned by the Township, not PennDOT (PennDOT owns the interchange only) yet they are paying 80% of the bill. Finally, 2019 saw Penn State Health purchase property along State Road to build a state of the art hospital with over 100 beds to service our community with a premier medical facility minutes away from most residents in the Township. When medical emergencies occur, the quicker a patient can see a doctor to receive care, the better the results.

Looking forward to 2020, the Township will continue to focus on transportation issues, including Stony Battery Road and Good Drive. Projects and plans to fund them are being developed for these two important North-South corridors in the form of grants and township funds. $1.5 million dollars is budgeted for 2020 road projects, to continue the accelerated paving program. Also, another $200,000 is planned on road pavement preservation projects to extend the life of our roads and delay more costly roadway maintenance. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. That applies to pavement too. A focus on fire services will continue with the creation of the Hempfield Area Fire Services Commission, a partnership with the East Hempfield and East Petersburg fire departments and communities, to strengthen and assist our volunteer fire companies. Finding volunteers and people willing to serve their community by actively serving in a fire department is challenging and becoming more and more difficult. This commission, with the full involvement of our fire companies, will look at ways to strengthen fire services for years to come to help ensure when you need them the most, they can respond.

Financially the Township is doing well. For the 10th year in a row, the Township has controlled cost and placed monies into the Capital Reserve Fund to tackle major infrastructure projects, with a focus on road projects such as the Centerville projects. For the next few years budget forecasts show that trend will continue. However, we are facing new financial pressures with continued unfunded mandates from both the State and Federal Governments. A big unfunded mandate is the Chesapeake Bay cleanup where the costs have been pushed down onto the local government and local tax payers.

However, even with these mandates we are committed to living within our means, maintaining important services and continuing investing in our road infrastructure.

East Hempfield Township is a great place to work, live in and raise a family. Our focus is to maintain the high quality of life that we have here, providing the necessary services that our residents and businesses need while ensuring that the tax payers get great value for what they are financing.

Home Improvement Scams

Home Improvement season is around the corner. With that comes the inevitable scams that are purported on numerous residents in the township. There are ways for you to minimize your risk. The law requires that contractors register with the Attorney General's Office. This is not an endorsement on the quality of work provided so you should also take steps to ensure that they are competent. Here are some tips to remember when you are embarking on any home improvement project:

- Obtain more than one bid for the job and check references
- Insist that the contract be in writing and keep copies for your records
- Don't pay the contractor before you read and sign a contract
- Don't pay the job in full, only put down a deposit
- Make sure the contract states work to be done, price, and start and end dates
- Obtain all information on the contractor including name, address and phone number
- Verify that they are registered through the Office of PA Attorney General <https://www.attorneygeneral.gov/protect-yourself/home-improvement/>
- Check for any complaints against the contractor through the Better Business Bureau <https://www.bbb.org/>

If you believe that you are being targeted by individuals or have entered into an agreement that could be a potential home improvement scam, contact East Hempfield Township Police at 717-898-3103. Should you have general questions, you can reach out to the HIC Consumer Helpline at 1-888-520-6680 for additional information. Know your rights under the law and protect yourself.
