Building a Better Logan City

Erin Bennett is a passionate advocate for change and a proud resident of Logan, UT. Having lived in Logan for the majority of her life, she has witnessed firsthand many of the challenges and opportunities that the community faces. Her personal journey, from experiencing homelessness to building a home with Habitat for Humanity, has shaped her perspective and fueled her drive to make a difference in the lives of others.

Erin's determination to improve her circumstances led her to pursue higher education. She enrolled in the Business Information Technology Management program at Western Governors University (WGU) and successfully completed her degree. Inspired by her achievements, she registered for the Masters of Business Administration program at WGU and obtained her MBA in 2015. Throughout her career, Erin has gained valuable experience in various aspects of business development and culture building. She has successfully created, implemented, and managed strategies across multiple departments, including human resources, health and safety, compliance, and operations. Her expertise in policy and procedure development has equipped her with the necessary skills to address complex issues and ensure effective governance.

Erin's dedication to community building extends beyond her professional endeavors. As a single mother raising her children in a modest home, she opened her doors to not only her own kids but also their friends in need. Her dinner table became a symbol of inclusivity, where everyone was welcome to share a meal. This experience instilled in Erin a deep appreciation for the power of community and the importance of supporting one another. After her children left the nest, Erin decided to attend a Logan City Council meeting out of curiosity. To her dismay, she discovered a lack of accountability and a refusal to acknowledge mistakes within the local government. Despite the misconduct that was even deemed criminal by a POST investigator, the council members seemed resistant to change. Erin realized that in order for Logan City to thrive, significant improvements in how local government operates were necessary.

Driven by her education, training, and experience, Erin has decided to run for Logan City Council. She firmly believes that her skill set aligns perfectly with the resources and strategies required to develop a culture within the city government that embodies American values and upholds civil rights. As the mother of a veteran, Erin has an understanding of the sacrifices made by countless families for the sake of freedom. She believes that honoring our troops and veterans goes beyond mere symbolism—it requires active civic engagement and community building. Erin Bennett is dedicated to ensuring that the sacrifices made by the men and women who have served our country are honored through effective and responsible governance. With her deep-rooted connection to the Logan community and her commitment to creating positive change, Erin is ready to build a better Logan for all its residents.
