McHenry County Conservation Foundation Appoints Carolyn Campbell to its Board of Directors

The McHenry County Conservation Foundation Board of Directors welcomes Carolyn Campbell as the newest Director. A McHenry County resident for more than 40 years, Carolyn currently represents District 2 on the McHenry County Board. Prior to her appointment as a County Board member, Carolyn served as a McHenry County Conservation District Trustee from 2017 to 2022.

“Protecting the environment not only for its own intrinsic value, but for the benefit of future generations is my passion,” said Campbell. “My five years as trustee for McHenry County Conservation District underscored the important role the McHenry County Conservation Foundation plays in the preservation and conservation of our natural and cultural resources and the management of our public lands. It is critical that we continue to support the land management agencies that steward these precious resources and I look forward to volunteering my time and leadership to an organization that is focused on protecting our natural areas to ensure a sustainable future.”

Campbell joins the Foundation’s nine other sitting directors who help the McHenry County Conservation Foundation further its mission to support, sustain, and advance the work of the McHenry County Conservation District and its partners.

“We are all pleased to welcome Carolyn to the Foundation Board of Directors,” stated Board President Kevin Ivers. “She brings years of experience and dedicated community involvement to the organization. As the Foundation continues to increase philanthropic support of the Conservation District, we are always looking to bring new and diverse voices to the table who have a passion for our public lands and open spaces.”
