Red Cliff News & Updates

COVID-19 Community Updates

Various Tribal programs, services, and events have been canceled or temporarily suspended in our efforts to limit the spread of COVID-19.

An up-to-date list can be found on the Tribal Facebook page, and is updated continuously throughout each day.

You can also find a series of video updates from the Red Cliff Health Division on the Tribal Facebook page.
Reminder to Check Fire Danger Levels

When fire danger levels are High, Very High, or Extreme, please stop all burning activities under the Red Cliff Burn Permits issued by the Environmental Department.

Burning under these issued permits can resume when fire danger levels are Low or Moderate conditions.

Check fire danger levels at: https://dnr.wi.gov/topic/forestfire/restrictions.html
or look for the Department’s Smokey the Bear signs on the intersection of HWY 13 and Blueberry Rd. and Pike Rd.

Per Tribal Resolution 4-16-2015A, burning grass, brush, wood in the 6x6x6 area are not allowed during High, Very High, and Extreme fire levels. However, 3x3x3 ring for ceremonial fires are still allowed. See the chart below for reference.

Contact the Environmental Office at 715-779-3650 or Wardens at 715-779-3792, if there are any questions.

Red Cliff Tribal Fish Hatchery Update

Boozhoo Everyone,
Here at the hatchery we are hoping everyone is doing well and staying safe and healthy. We would like to inform you that we still have fish in the building, and they are growing each and every day! A few staff members are taking good care of them every day and making sure their tanks are clean.

It is almost that time of the year where everyone should be getting their anit (spears) sharpened, jiimaan (boats) ready and lights shining bright. If biboon (winter) ever decides to let up it will be the period to harvest ogaa (walleye) in no time. Making certain your anit are sharp, jiimaan are water ready, and lights are bright will all ensure you have successful harvest.

It is our hope to collect eggs from Lake Namakagon and the Eau Claire chain of lakes this year. If you are looking for a visual representation of our ogaa setup, please visit the Red Cliff YouTube page and check out our walleye video (https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QRPu8a41yds).

The hatchery has a few other projects that we will be working on in the near future as well. The biggest project is the replacement of well pump number one. A new, more efficient motor and pump will replace old and outdated equipment. We will also be adding a few new drives to run the pumps.

Springtime at Frog Bay Tribal National Park

Red Cliff Treaty Natural Resources staff completed a bunch of cleanup and chainsaw work after this winter’s heavy snow brought a lot of trees down!

The Park is looking gorgeous with this early spring weather.
Currently, the restroom at the trailhead is closed and we are recommending only local visitors at this time. While you’re out please follow physical distancing guidelines.

12 Tips To Build Positive Family Connections
Relapse Prevention Programs Offer Assistance

During this time of stay at home orders, self-quarantine and physical distancing it is important we still practice our relapse prevention program. If support groups are one of your relapse prevention tools, there are support groups still available online. Support groups are

Dear Families,
We’ve been thinking of you lately and wanted to write to let you know that you are not alone. Lots of us moms, dads, aunts, uncles, cousins and grandparents have been feeling overwhelmed by all this Covid19 stuff. With so many of our day-to-day normal things like work and school changing out of our control it can leave us feeling helpless. In those moments it helps to remind ourselves that we are not alone and that all families throughout our community and across the globe are having a hard time with this right now. We are good parents and loving families.

Having hard days does not make us bad parents and it does not mean we have failed as a parent/family. It simply means we had a hard day. We are good moms, dads, aunts, uncles, cousins and grandparents who love our children and want to keep them safe and protected. The most important way we can do that during this crisis (in addition to following the CDC guidelines of course) is to help our kids know and believe that we are all in this together and that we as caregivers/parents are on their side. The stronger we build our positive connection with our kids, the less scary this pandemic will be to them (see our tips on how to do this).

Remember, we are all in this together and we will get through this together. We are here to help you through this challenging time. Our support line is staffed Monday through Friday from 8am to 4:30pm and can be reached directly by dialing 715-779-3509.

12 Tips to Build Positive Connections with your Family During Covid19

First - manage your stress - we must manage our stress so we can help kids manage theirs.

Above all choose kindness - kindness is a purposeful state of mind - not just a random act.

Let it go, let it go - now is not the time for grudge holding, if you get mad don’t stay mad.

Blame things on Covid19 - it is nobody’s fault we can’t go to work, shopping, school, or see our friends. Let kids know this is because of Covid19, it is not your fault and it is not their fault.

Ask “is it working?” - readjust schedules and rules to whatever works during this time.

See things from the eyes of a child - it is our job to understand how kids see the world, it is not their job to learn to see it from our grown-up eyes.

Play family games and let the kids win - see your “win” as having spent time together.

Tell kids supportive stuff - “I get that you are worried about this, I’m on your side, we will make it through together.”

Power struggles have little to no benefit during this time of crisis - Now is not the time for rigid parenting. We need flexibility. Instead of saying “do the dishes because I am your parent and I said so” try saying “we all need to help our family through this and right now it would really help if you did the dishes.”

The goal is - for us to still like each other at the end of the day and feel connected as a family right now.

Learning activities are a way to keep a child’s learning brain engaged - this protects against anxiety but don’t overdo it- if you or your kids are feeling stressed then take a break and come back to it later.

Pour on the positive praise and happy experiences for kids and adults - We need lots of positive messages and happy experiences to counteract the negative things that are happening outside our control.

Warmly, RCCHC BH Department
using the social media app Zoom at this time in the area. Another good tool to stay in touch with supportive people is through face time or messenger, telephone calls. We here at AODA are still connecting with people through telephone calls and Zoom, where applicable. So if you are struggling with addiction, as tough as it can be during this time, pick up the telephone and call a supportive person, or check on a friend to see how he or she is doing.

Getting out of “self” is good for your own well-being too! Make extra phone calls during the week to make up for face to face time with supportive people. Remember to get some form of exercise and be in nature. It only takes five minutes outside to start feeling the good effects of nature. The birds are coming back, spring rain is in the air. It is good I have seen families get out by the lake and enjoy the spring fresh air!

COVID-19: Individuals with Substance Use Disorders are at high risk for complications

People who smoke tobacco, vape, smoke marijuana, have opioid use disorder, or use methamphetamine are a very vulnerable population to COVID-19 due to the effects the drugs they are using have on the respiratory and pulmonary (heart) health. Those with substance use disorder are more likely to experience homelessness or incarceration which increases the possibility of transmission of COVID-19. There is large stigma around substance use disorders which is a major risk factor in someone not getting treated for the virus as quick as someone without a substance use disorder. Other risk factors include: decreased access to healthcare and disruption to syringe services, medications, and other supports needed.

Smoking tobacco and marijuana/vaping risks
- Enhanced tissue damage and inflammation in the lungs
- There is limited research with vaping and lung damage, but there is reason to believe that lung damage can occur from vaping
- Lowered ability of the lungs to heal from infections
- Higher chance of developing pneumonia due to lung damage from smoking/vaping

Opioid and Methamphetamine use disorder risks
- Opioids slow the breathing and puts those that use them at higher risk of developing pneumonia and other complications related to COVID-19
- Overdoses are more likely to happen due to social distancing because there is a chance that others are not around to be able to administer naloxone to reverse the effects
- Higher chance of mortality if the individual has COVID-19 due to the virus further compromising the lungs

Let’s make the best of a situation and continue to be resilient as a community. If it helps, tell yourself and others that this too shall pass! Soon enough our doors will be open again here at Mishomis Wellness Center and Noojimo’ewewin Center.

CARES Act Lawsuit

From Indian Z

The Trump administration has determined that Alaska Native corporations can receive shares of the $8 billion coronavirus relief fund promised to tribal governments.

In a brief filed at a 5pm Eastern deadline, government attorneys said the Department of the Treasury finally resolved the question that has been on everyone’s minds since the controversy blew up two weeks ago.

“Up against a 30-day deadline to obligate $8 billion dollars among hundreds of Tribal governments, defendant has reasonably interpreted the term ‘Indian tribe,’ as it is defined in the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security Act, to include Alaska Native Corporations,” the 26-page document states.

The brief further argues that tribes have no right to challenge the determination just made by Treasury. Their only recourse, according to government attorneys, is to seek oversight through the department’s Office of Inspector General.

“The fact that Congress specified a means for enforcement of the statutory provisions—means which are Executive, not Judicial, in nature—is evidence that Congress did not intend judicial oversight of the manner in which the funds are distributed,” the Department of Justice wrote. But even if the judge handling the CARES Act lawsuit wants to entertain the tribal objections, the Trump administration contends that Treasury’s interpretation is owed “deference.” The determination was made in “consultation” with the Department of the Interior, whose lead official on the $8 billion fund — Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs Tara Sweeney — has come under fire for her role in the matter.

“Even if this court were to conclude that it has the ability to review defendant’s decision, after consultation with the Department of the Interior, about the proper manner in which to distribute the funds, Congress’s deferential grant of decision-making authority to those agencies with the expertise on the issues at hand warrants deference from this court,” the brief claims.

The tribal plaintiffs will now be able to respond to the brief. The two separate CARES Act cases have been consolidated, with 14 Indian nations opposed to the inclusion of Alaska Native corporations in the $8 billion fund.

Separate from the brief, Treasury released a document on April 23, confirming that Alaska Native corporations are eligible to participation. The determination is cited in the court filing.

“After consultation with the Department of the Interior, Treasury has concluded that Alaska Native regional and village corporations as defined in or established pursuant to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act are eligible to receive payments from the Fund in the amounts to be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury,” the document reads.

“In determining the appropriate allocation of payments to Tribal governments, Treasury intends to take steps to account for overlaps between Alaskan Native village membership and Alaska Native corporation shareholders or other beneficiaries,” it continues.

The language comes in reference to the “double-dipping” that tribes have alleged will occur once Alaska Native corporations are included. The court brief asserts that Treasury will take steps to prevent tribal “interests from being harmed” by multiple counts of populations in Alaska.
